3 SEIZED AT GUNPOINT IN SCHOOL

Shot Fired as Roxbury Youths Are Surprised Attempting to Crack Safe Open

Three Roxbury youths who went to school today in the wrong way were captured at gunpoint in the Roxbury Clerical school at Warren and Montrose sts., Roxbury, after they are alleged to have ransacked schoolrooms and attempted to crack the office safe.

The trio, who abandoned enough tools almost to build a bridge, cowered in fright on a rear stairway and surrendered, after one shot, fired by Sergt. Frank Sullivan of the Dudley st. police station, had halted their flight.

They gave their names as Theodore McDonald, 17, of Blue Hill ave., and Albert Monichiello, 19, and Henry J. Benda, 19, both of Burrill st.

Edward Grant, janitor of the school, hear da noise upstairs early today as he stoked his fires. Leaving the building, he hastened to the Dudley st. station and told police someone was in the school.

FIRES ONE SHOT

Sergt. Sullivan, with Patrolmen Regan, Donahue and Crowley, hastened there and Crowley was left in the first floor corridor while the others went u pthe stairway.

Hearing a noise on the rear stairway, Crowley groped his way toward the back of the school just as Sergt. Sullivan, glimpsing three figures hastening down the stairway, threw his flashlight below and fired a shot over their heads.

The trio halted and were captured. In their inspection of the school, police found that every room had been ransacked and that a big hole had been ripped in the outer door of the office safe. An attempt to pierce the inner door was unsuccessful.

On the three youths were found $16 in cash and two ladies' rings. The suspects were taken to police headquarters and placed in a lineup with eight more holdup and thievery suspects, who were faced by 15 holdup victims.

ONLY ONE IDENTIFIED

Only one of the 11 suspects was picked out and identified, however. He was Jerry M. Meoln, 23, of Havre st., East Boston, who yesterday was brought down into captivity in Milk st. with a flying tackle by Traffic Officer John J. Melavin, after Meoln is alleged to have snatched $826 in cash and checks from a shoe salesman.

Meoln and Edward Young, the salesman, employed at the Wallace shoe store in Washington st., picked Meoln out of the lineup as the thief.

John J. Zoltman, 20, of New York was also in the lineup, but Jennie Robbins of Columbia rd. Dorchester, and Florence Dussault of Audubon rd., Back Bay, clerks in the Fanny Farmer candy store, 42 Winter st., failed to identify him as the man who held them up and fled from the store safe on Saturday night.

After the Blast

COURT ACTION STARTED BY HULTMAN

Mayor Curley's Holdup of Increases Called "Harsh" and "Usurpation of Rights"

A legal battle to force the step rate pay increase for police was opened today.

Two writs of mandamus and a writ of certiorari were sought in the Supreme Court to compel payments of the increases held up by Mayor Curley.

Two of the actions were filed by Police Commissioner Hultman and the third by Patrolman Thomas E. Barron.

The latter was filed for a test case to obtain a court ruling on at least one man who is directly involved.

Barron was one who refused last Friday to sign the city payroll when it was submitted to police without the step rate increase.

MAYOR CALLED "HARSH"

Each petition named Mayor Curley and four other city officials. Hultman's charging the Mayor with "harsh and arbitrary" actions in which he attempted to nullify the law and usurp the powers and duties of the police commissioner.

The others named are Edward M. Gallagher, acting mayor; Rupert S. Carven, auditor, Edmund L. Dolan, treasurer, and Charles J. Fox, budget commissioner.

"The action of the mayor and the other respondents constitutes an attempt to reduce the pay of the police and pay cannot be reduced, according to law without the concurrence of the mayor and police commissioner," Hultman's petition read.

"In view of the small amount of money and the harsh and arbitrary action of the respondents, it is an attempt to nullify the law and to usurp the powers and duties in me as police commissioner."

COST $22,417 IN ALL.

Hultman had previously pointed out to the mayor that the annual police increases would cost the city only $22,417, one-tenth of 1 per cent of the annual police budget.

Today's action followed refusal of many police to sign the payroll last Friday when the annual increases were not included.

As they were being filed a ruling came from Corp. Counsel Samuel Silverman that any officer who signed did not sign away his legal rights to sue for the increases.

2400 ON JOB DIGGING ICE IN STREETS

City and "L" Pass Buck Back and Forth as Autoists Bewail Traffic Peril

Stung by criticism of the dangerous condition of important traffic arteries and many other streets because of ice ruts, city officials increased the snow and ice removal force to 2400 workers today.

This was a increase of 400 men over yesterday, and the new force was drawn 1600 from the public welfare department and 800 from the regular public works department organization.

The workmen, with 75 trucks, were assigned chiefly to the Back Bay and Roxbury, with a small detachment working downtown.

ICE HILLS NOT MELTING

Similarly hazardous conditions prevail in surrounding cities and towns with little being done to remove the ice which was left in practically all the streets after the soft snow had been plowed away.

Continued cold weather is to be Greater Boston's weather fare, according to official predictions today, and there is small likelihood of the ice humps and hillocks melting for days or even weeks.

Conditions in Malden are particularly bad, due to the failure of city officials to remove the snow except in Malden sq. and Maplewood sq. and a few other places.

It was explained that the city left it for the Boston Elevated to do as in the past, but, due to replacement of car lines with buses during the past year, the Elavated put the job back on the city. Businessmen and residents were voicing loud protests today.

TRAFFIC IS DANGEROUS

In Medford, Mayor John H. Burke had a large force of workmen on snow removal and the streets were quickly cleared but the slush that the plows did not take up froze as in other localities, and some arteries, notably High st., are in bad shape.

Everett, Melrose, Cambridge, Somerville, Lawrence, Lowell and other cities reported similar conditions, ice ruts making auto traffic more dangerous than it has been in years, despite energetic work in some of the communities in attacking the snowfall.

"The job is about as difficult as any we've ever encountered," said Peter F. Gerrity, supervising 500 man city division workmen on snow removal in Boston today.

"That's because the ice is packed old and we have had to attack it with picks. It takes time.

HEAVY JAP GUNS AGAIN POUND AT WOOSUNG

Shell Blows Up Powder Magazine; New Battle Is Raging in Chapei Zone

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (4 p. m.) (AP) — Japanese warships concentrated a furious fire on Woosung forts this afternoon and one of their projectiles blew up a fort powder magazine, but the Chinese defenders continued to cling to their defenses.

In the midst of the most intensive action of the Japanese off-shore offensive since they began their efforts to encircle the Chinese last Saturday, a terrific blast shook the Woosung fort zone.

A pillar of smoke rose high over the mud structures and hung like a pall over the countryside.

5000 DEFENDERS

Unofficial estimates indicated the number of Chinese troops defending the forts at nearly 5000, comparing favorably in size with the attacking Japanese forces.

The International Settlement was the target for shells from both Japanese and Chinese guns today as a fierce artillery duel raged over the Chapei sector, and at least one foreigner and several Chinese refugees were injured.

Mrs. Harry Robertson, British wife of a detective-inspector in the municipal police force, was

5000 WORKERS MAY STRIKE

Boston's cloak and dress workers, involving from 5000 to 8000 members of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union, may strike tomorrow over the question of a new working agreement, it was said today by Jacob Halpern, manager of the union's joint board.

The strike may be called if the manufacturers' organization, the Dress and Cloak Association, fails to reply to the union demand that the manufacturers meet with a committee of the union and discuss a new working agreement.

This demand followed official notification by the manufacturers' organization that the present working agreement, which ends next Monday, will not be continued.

Under terms of this agreement, either side could terminate it by notifying the other in writing.

As soon as they received the notification of the agreement's abrogation, union officials demanded a conference with the manufacturers, but up to today this demand had not been replied to.

In anticipation of trouble over the agreement, a strike committee has already been formed by the union, with Vice-President Philip Kramer as chairman. This committee is prepared to act toward a strike as soon as given the word, Chairman Kramer said.

BLASTS INJURE MAN, WOMAN

An aged Somerville man suffered burns that may be fatal, and a Winthrop woman was blown through a plate glass window in two explosions today.

The victims are Horace Maren, 70, who lives on the premises at 46-48-50 Union sq., Somerville, where he is caretaker, and Miss Daisy Lewis, 36, of 82 Crystal ave., Winthrop.

Maren was burned, according to Deputy Fire Chief Horace W. Kutchins of Somerville, when gases accumulated about a heater under the Whitney & Young hardware store, exploded when he lighted a match.

CLOTHES IN FLAMES.

His clothes aflame, Maren ran to the street. He pulled off his burning overalls and beat out flames on his shirt and trousers. A passing motorist drove him to Central Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list.

The explosion caused $200 damage in the cellar of the block, which houses several stores and, in one section, the Union Square Inn. There were several guests at the inn, but they were not disturbed by the blast. The Somerville Merchants' Building Association owns the premises.

WOMAN IS INJURED

Miss Lewis was injured when she lighted a stove in McQuarrie's Restaurant, 265 Washington ave., Winthrop, where she is a cook. The blast blew her through a plate glass window into the street.

Patrolman Raymond W. Butler carried her to the nearby home of Dr. J. J. Abrams. After treatment for burns and cuts about the face and arms she was taken to her own home.

Mrs. Guild, Ill in Her Bed, Answers Own Phone Calls

Mrs. Curtis Guild, society leader, may be down, but she's never out.

In bed with a slight heart attack, the widow of a famous Massachusetts Governor, is personally answering all telephone inquiries regarding her condition and in a conversation with a Boston Evening American reporter today, she proved to be the same good sport as always.

The following dialogue ensued after the phone connection with Mrs. Guild's Marlboro street house had been established:

"Is this Mrs. Guild's home?"

"Yes, this is Mrs. Guild speaking."

"How are you feeling?"

"I'm talking from my bed."

"When do you think you'll get out?"

"I'm afraid I'm in indefinitely. I'm not suited for this at all, and I don't like it."

"That's too bad, there's nothing more aggravating than having to stay in bed. Isn't there any prospect of you getting up soon?"

"Not until my heart stops fluttering."

"I hope you're better soon."

"Thank you. Thank you for calling."

BIG JAPANESE GUNS AGAIN BATTER WOOSUNG FORTS

SHELL BLASTS POWDER DUMP; CHINESE STILL HOLD GROUND

Back to their Shanghai "trenches," American sailors landing in Chinese seaport during a previous outbreak. Similar scenes are being re-enacted today as Yankee tars are sent ashore to protect American lives and property in the present Sino-Japanese trouble. Chinese winters are cold, as you will notice by way the sailors have their coat collars turned up against the biting wind. (I.N.R. photo).

wounded by a splinter from a Japanese shell which burst near her as she was walking along a street in the western part of the Settlement. Several Japanese shells struck in this area, overshooting their marks by about four miles. Mrs. Robertson's wound was said to be slight.

Mrs. Robertson suffered little ill effect from her taste of warfare save for extreme nervousness.

HID BEHIND TREE

She said she heard the projectile hiss over her and got behind a tree.

"As I crouched," she said, "I felt a terrific explosion and there came a rain of dust and earth. When I recovered from the shock I saw a large crater a few feet away, from which had come the shower of earth. Had I been on the other side of the tree I surely would have been killed. Two motor trucks were wrecked by the explosion."

Today's wounded in the settlement included, besides Mrs. Robertson, eight Chinese women. On Saturday Dr. Love Rankin of Sweetwater, Tenn., an instructor in the National Central University, was slightly wounded in the arm by a splinter from a Japanese air bomb.

Nineteen shells, mostly duds, landed in the French concession and a number fell not far from a public school for girls on Municipal road, just outside the settlement.

Chinese shells, aimed at the Japanese airdrome at Hongkew Park, had previously been accepted in principle by the Chinese.

While the brunt of the fighting was shifted to Chapei in the afternoon, the Japanese soldiers swarmed like bees at Woosung preparing for still another attack upon that stubborn stronghold. They toiled at building pontoons to replace the bridge over Wonsung Creek which the Chinese destroyed. The creek separates them from the forts and the village.

In the Chaowanpang railway yards, within a mile of the creek, army engineers built armored shields on railway handcars to serve as a new means of advancing the troops against the bitter fire of the Chinese defenders. The Chinese fire was so deadly that the Japanese were unable to build defense works near the creek.

The bodies of five Japanese bluejackets were brought into a Red Cross cantonment near Chaowanpang. Nearer the front the bodies of a Chinese man and woman lay in a muddy field and two dead Chinese soldiers, riddled with bullets, were sprawled across the railroad tracks nearby, their hands tied behind their backs.

VILLAGE A WRECK

A Japanese officer said the Japanese losses were heavy, in dead and wounded, but he insisted the Chinese losses were heavier still. The Japanese force at Woosung was placed at 4400 by their own officials.

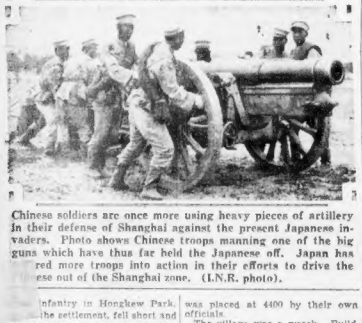
The village was a wreck. Buildings that escaped the bombardment by the warships' guns over the week-end were reduced to ruins by the shelling of the last two days.

A group of 350 United States soldiers, men of the 31st Infantry, second battalion, reliev ed a company of Shanghai volunteers in a mile-wide sector on the north boundary of the international Settlement during the day.

They saw action immediately. Bombs and anti-aircraft guns began booming as they took their posts. The Japanese had begun an air raid over Chapei.

Word from Amoy said the American destroyer Stewart had arrived from Canton, and a message from Nanking said all the British women and children there had been advised by their consul to get out of town.

Japanese headquarters said they had instructed commanders of all their land and naval forces to avoid causes for friction with American and other foreign troops, to maintain the most friendly relations with all foreign garrisons and to be most careful for the safety of foreign civilians.



Chinese soldiers are once more using heavy pieces of artillery in their defense of Shanghai against the present Japanese invaders. Photo shows Chinese troops manning one of the big guns which have thus far held the Japanese off. Japan has rushed more troops into action in their efforts to drive the brave out of the Shanghai zone. (I.N.R. photo).

Infantry in Hongkew Park, the settlement, fell short and also caused much property damage. Civilians immediately evacuated this area, which is partly within the Japanese lines.

TURN TO OLD SECTOR

Late this afternoon the fighting went on at a fierce pace through the day after the Japanese, apparently discouraged over the prospect of capturing the Woosung forts, turned the force of their attack on the Chapei sector, which has borne the brunt of nearly 12 days of fighting.

A Japanese troop ship with reinforcements for Shanghai ran aground in the Yangtze river during the morning. Japanese soldiers were rushed into Chapei, however, to reinforce the bluejackets already there.

Today's early attack on the Woosung fortress was turned back by a blistering machine-gun fire from the Chinese defenders, who hung to their posts in spite of the fact that the guns of the fortress have long been silenced and its walls shot to ruins.

JAPS ARE ACTIVE

Vice-Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, commander of the British forces, tried to bring about peace during the day by proposing a truce and an immediate end to hostilities, but Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister to China, told him the offensive would continue until the Chinese were driven back 20 miles from Shanghai. The truce proposal

JAP CHIEFTAIN ASSASSINATED

Tokyo, Feb. 9 (AP)—Junnosuke Inouye, 63, oneof Japan's outstanding financiers and a leader of the Minseito party, was killed tonight by a 23-year-old assassin who fired on him as he arrived at a political meeting.

The assassin, Tadashi Konuma, 23, was arrested immediately. The motive for the crime was not known.

Next to Yuko Hamaguchi, who died last August of an assassin's bullet, Mr. Inouye, who twice served as finance minister, was regarded as the strongest man in the Minseito party.

Reijiro Wakatsuki succeeded Hamaguchi as premier and head of the party, but his elevation was considered a temporary expedient and Inouye was expected to become the party chief and premier whenever the Minseito faction returned to power, probably in the general election which is to be held on Feb. 20.

Saws Out Coffins as Big Battle Lulls

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (AP)—A deathlike silence hung over the Hongkew no man's land late this afternoon as the fierce battle between the Chinese and Japanese lulled.

Suddenly the grating screech of an unoiled saw split the silence. It turned out to be a Chinese coolie sawing rough boards into six-foot lengths.

"What are you doing?" the coolie was asked.

"Making coffins," he said without concern.

U.S. Regulars Are on Job, Patrolling Battle-Wrecked Slum Area in Shanghai

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (AP)—Up on the northern Settlement boundary today the 31st United States infantry took over the patrol from a British detachment. They were close enough to hear the shooting, but their position was about a mile from the action in Chapei.

It was the second battalion which took over first, spread along a mile of the Soochow Creek. Ahead of them was the company of Shanghai volunteers.

Their patrol was in an area which constitutes the section of Shanghai's slums. Facing them was the creek, one of the dirtiest streams in the world, littered with sampans and other small craft which are the only homes thousands of Chinese men, women and children ever had.

Along the creek bank the dogs and cats, ducks and chickens from the squalid river colony were scavenging for food while the American troops built bonfires against the unaccustomed cold.

Behind the American line were dingy storehouses, coal dumps, and small Chinese factories against which leaned the rickety stands where petty merchants dealt soup and rice to the natives.

The young fellows seemed to be enjoying it, but the oldtimers who had served with the 31st in France and in Siberia were exercising the soldier's inalienable right to complain.

"What's it all about anyhow?" said one sergeant from Oklahoma, using more picturesque language than that.

His answer was a blast from the artillery firing across Chapei. It seemed to give him a lot of satisfaction.

MURDERESS IN FRENZY PLANS LAST APPEAL

Feared Woman, Facing Noose, Will Try to Destroy Herself

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 9—Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, 27-year-old slayer of two women, who has been condemned to die on the gallows, is under guard in her cell.

Sheriff J. R. McFadden ordered a day and night guard maintained, fearing Mrs. Judd might attempt to commit suicide.

Before the state may hang Mrs. Judd an appeal is mandatory under Arizona law. The defense counsel said the appeal would be made soon after sentence is pronounced Feb. 23.

CRINGES IN FEAR

Mrs. Judd yawned when the jury decreed that she be hanged. But today she was stunned and she cringed as she asked the jail matron:

"Can I beat the verdict through appeal?"

The jury deliberated two hours and 40 minutes and took six ballots before returning the "guilty" verdict.

When that verdict was returned Mrs. Judd was the calmest woman in the court room. She kept twisting and winding her handkerchief, but her face was emotionless.

The jury took six ballots before condemning Mrs. Judd to death because Edward Landrigan, 27, bachelor-farmer, who saw his first motion picture show last week, held out against hanging a woman.

JURY 11 TO 1

"Yes, I was the last one to vote to hang her," Landrigan drawled. "But there were 11 against me and I couldn't hold out against all of them."

Other jurors said Landrigan had opposed the death penalty because he felt for a time that other persons might have been involved in the double murder and he did not want to make the mistake of sending Mrs. Judd to the gallows when there was a possibility of "something coming out later."

Foreman Stewart R. Thompson, 26-year-old salesman said:

"There never was a doubt in the minds of the jurors concerning her sanity. In fact, insanity never was mentioned in our deliberations. We first voted on whether she was guilty or not guilty, and the first ballot stood 12 to 0—guilty. We were unanimous for conviction.

'CRAZY AS HARE'

"Then we debated what the penalty should be. On the second ballot the vote was 8 to 4 for the death penalty. The third ballot was 9 to 3 for hanging. The fourth was 10 to 2, the fifth 11 to 1, and after the sixth ballot was taken we had all agreed on the death penalty."

Mrs. Judd's chief attorney, Paul Schenck, said:

"She's as crazy as a March hare. No person on earth could hear a sentence of death and not fall to show the least spark of emotion. I never desert a client. Mrs. Judd will continue to get the best of my efforts until every resource has been exhausted.

"The verdict cannot be explained on anything that was introduced before the jury. Justice was not served by this verdict. The people of Arizona will some day learn that just hanging a woman does not do away with facts which the jury refused to consider."

JAP CABINET FACES CRISIS

Tokio, Feb. 9 (INS)—The Japanese cabinet faced another crisis over the Shanghai situation today when Premier Nakahashi, minister of home affairs, threatened to resign should the government decide to send more troops to China.

The home minister said further dispatch of soldiers to the Shanghai area would be an excessive expense. Others in the cabinet, leaders of the military factions, favored sending additional forces in view of the unexpected Chinese strength.

The war office officially announced that some of the Japanese troops which recently marched into Harbin will be withdrawn soon.

Meanwhile the government prepared for its official presentation to foreign powers of the neutral zone proposal, under which five leading Chinese cities, including Shanghai, would be patrolled by foreign troops with Chinese soldiers barred.

Reports from Washington said the plan would definitely be rejected by the United States if it were ever officially presented, and other capitals seemed to be equally against it.

Washington objected most to the virtual scrapping of the nine-power treaty.

GENEVA HAILS U. S., GERMAN ARMS PLAN

Geneva, Feb. 9 (INS)—The American ambassador to Belgium, Hugh Gibson, and Chancellor Heinrich Bruening of Germany today laid before the World disarmament conference their respective countries' aims in dealing with the arms problem.

Gibson, proposing nine points for widespread reduction of arms along virtually all lines, was received with loud applause and after his speech was congratulated personally by Andre Tardieu, French war minister, and other delegates.

Jap Navy Guns Mix Death and Salutes

Every time a non-combatant warship passed the Japanese destroyer line off shore, the Japanese ceased firing at the forts, dipped their flags, reloaded their hot guns with blanks, and fired salutes.

It was the general opinion the American delegate's speech would go far toward settling definite points. The speech showed, it was said, there were several lines along which a definite program for disarmament could be mapped out.

U. S. POINTS APPLAUDED

Proposals by Gibson that drew forth salvos of applause were:

Abolition of submarines and poison gas.

Restriction of land tanks, heavy mobile guns and other purely offensive war materials.

Chancellor Bruening received with the greatest ovation yet accorded any speaker before the conference, offered disarmament was "absolutely necessary to alleviate the formidable crisis oppressing the entire world."

GERMANY HITS AT FRANCE

Germany, he said, would make definite proposals to remedy the arms situation "at the proper time," by indicating "practical methods for a general effective reduction of armaments by the prohibition and limitation of essentially offensive armaments."

One of Bruening's most important remarks was interpreted as being aimed directly at France, whose armaments views are as far on one side of the mean as Germany's are on the other.

"We must end the tendency on the part of one nation," he said, "to assure by one's self the possibility of enlarging one's military forces by an interpretation of treaties."

Britain Backs U. S. in Opposing Jap Proposal

London, Feb. 9 (INS)—Great Britain agrees entirely with the United States that the Japanese proposal for permanent demilitarizing of the principal seaports of China is "outside the sphere of practical policy."

This was the information given to the International News service today by a spokesman at the Foreign Office.

It was revealed that Sir Francis Lindley, British ambassador to Japan, had discussed the suggestion informally with Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese foreign minister.

Partly as a result of this conversation and the unsympathetic attitude of the United States, the Japanese proposal will not be presented formally, it was understood.

The Foreign Office spokesman admitted that conversations were continuing between representatives of Great Britain, the United States, France, Italy and Germany regarding the possible dispatch of another joint communication to Japan in connection with the situation at Shanghai.

In all probability, the note will take up the two points in the last note which were flatly rejected by Japan, namely hailing of mediation and submission of all outstanding Sino-Japanese disputes to arbitration with third-party mediation.

Clark Wants Higher-Ups Arrested in Liquor Cases

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 9—Federal Judge William Clark would like to see more of the nation's higher-ups brought before him on prohibition violation charges and less of the nation's "laborers."

Judge Clark

He said yesterday he was "getting sick" of having paid helpers brought up on liquor charges and not the owners of raided stills, in asking Lewis J. Tutt, deputy prohibition administrator, for an explanation.

"I've told agents repeatedly," he told Tutt, "that they must bring in the owners, too, and not only the laborers. Now I want some action."

Demands on Amelia's Time "Nuisance," Says Putnam

George P. Putnam

That is the sum and substance of his answer to the query: "What is the life of a famous woman's husband?"

"It's a nuisance when I come home all set for a chatty evening by the fireside and find Amelia is dashing off to Washington or is booked to address some club," Putnam said.

"But there must be give and take in all marriages and it might be worse," he added. "A wife who had nothing to do all day might call on me to take her night-clubbing at night."

The three bombs, however, were amateurish in construction and did little damage.

'CERTAIN JOKES,' SMOKING LED TO EMERSON GIRLS' BAN

Contends College Has Right to "Protect" Students; Firm Seeks Court Order

Because girl students congregated to tell "certain" jokes, smoke, lounge and loiter, they were barred in an order of Emerson College from a Back Bay drug store.

That was the reply today of Dean Harry Seymour Ross of Emerson to an equity action filed against the college by Morse & Sturnick, Inc., of Huntington ave., Back Bay.

The druggists ask that the college be restrained from carrying out "threats" of expulsion for students who patronize the store.

TOLD "CERTAIN JOKES"

They also named the Vincent Coll respondents because of an alleged suggestion in the order that the girls go there instead of the drug store.

"This is a thing that any college has to face," Dean Ross said today.

"A college has the right to control the conduct of its students if it has their interests at heart.

"The girls made the drug store more of a headquarters than they did the college. They had a habit of lounging and loitering, smoking, reading certain magazines and swapping certain jokes.

"I felt the order was for their best interests."

HEARING MONDAY

The case is scheduled for hearing Monday on the question of a temporary injunction to restrain the college from carrying out the alleged threats.

The papers stated that until Dec. 11 the drug store furnished light lunches as well as drug articles and stationery to the students. Dean Ross called a meeting of the students and informed them that automatic expulsion would result to any student seen or reported in the drug store at any time for any reason.

WHEN COLL'S GANG WERE "STOOD-UP" IN BABY KILLING ARRAIGNMENT

SCENE OF KID LEADER'S DEATH

This formidable appearing gang, lined up in New York police headquarters not long ago, proves the modern paraphrasing of the adage that "he who lives by the gun shall perish by it." The lineup above was made when Vincent Coll and his mob were taken in on baby killing charges. The mob now is pretty well shot to pieces. Domnick Ordino is convicted of murder and is awaiting execution; Michael Basile, whose brother was shot last week, has vanished; Pasquale del Greco was slain last week; Frank Giordano is also waiting his turn in the "hot seat" and Coll, mob leader, met his death yesterday at the hands of gangland foes. View at the right shows the telephone booth in a West 23rd st. drugstore, not a very colorful spot for a gang chieftain to meet death, but the place where he was cut down by bullets from a sub-machine gun. Sketch in the center shows how the gangster was "rubbed out" by his enemies. Coll's "bodyguard," the third man shown in the sketch, is shown fleeing in terror. Not one of the killers has escaped. Check each man in above layout. (I. N. R. photos.)

32 QUIZZED ON GUSTIN DEATHS

Thirty-two witnesses, including one who has been defiant and one who has been afraid, were called to the courthouse today as the grand jury took up the Christmas-week gang murders.

Presentation of evidence in the shooting of Frankie Gustin and Bernard "Dodo" Walsh in a Hanover st., North End, building on Dec. 22, was begun under direction of Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle.

He seeks the indictment of Joe Lombardi, Salvatore Congemi and Franco Cucchiara, held by the lower court out of seven originally arrested on murder charges.

Timothy J. Coffey, Gustin gangster, arrested at the scene and released by the lower court, was summoned as a witness.

He was defiant of Doyle's attempt to wrest information from him at a conference yesterday; his attitude today was not known.

The only girl witness is Miss Irene Franklin, of Rockland st., Mattapan, who has been under guard of policewomen since the shooting because, she said she was afraid of being killed or kidnaped.

Miss Franklin was a stenographer in the office of Julius H. Wolfson, attorney, where Gustin staggered, mortally wounded, and died, and where Coffey was arrested.

Patrolman Patrick McCool, who testified at the lower court hearing he saw Lombardi and Congemi on the day of the murders in the building where the gangsters were slain, also was called.

ROGERS BACK FROM 'WARS'

Wants to Get in on Dough, He Says

New York, Feb. 9—Will Rogers, who wisecracked his way around the world, arrived today from Europe "to get in on this dough everybody is going to dig out of their sock."

"I hear they are making a drive against hoarding," he said, "and I don't want to be away under the circumstances."

In Europe, he said, when you're introduced to somebody they say "Glad to meet you, cancel the debts." He saw the opening of the disarmament conference and it was "like the Follies, only harder to get in, all the diplomats were selling seats."

He said Andrew Mellon would be a very popular ambassador to Great Britain. "He's got enough money to be popular anywhere."

BET ON HOOVER

Rogers revealed that he had offered to bet Ray Long, publisher, that Hoover would be re-elected, but Mrs. Rogers admitted the money wasn't in sight at the critical moment. Then he turned loose a barrage of questions.

"How is my friend Jack Garner goin' That's a soft job because the Speaker don't do nothing and don't get to say nothin'.

"Tell me about Alfalfa Bill Murray of Oklahoma. There's a boy for you who may be President. With this deadlock and all, Bill may sneak in. He's a 30-to-1 shot now, but he'll come up. I'm sneaking in with Bill."

"Everywhere I went a war broke out just after I left. Say, ain't these Chinese putting up a battle? I flew hundreds of miles with a Chinese pilot."

ADDED FOR GIBBONS

Rogers inquired particularly for Floyd Gibbons, International News Service war correspondent in the Chinese fighting zone, with whom he made a plane flight to Manchuria.

"Gibbons didn't like it much," he said, "Anybody who flies with a Chinese pilot feels like Lindbergh must have felt when he started across the Atlantic."

"I flew over Jerusalem and though I didn't stop I could hear the wailin'. That was amateur wailin', however, compared to what I heard as soon as the ship came within earshot of Nantucket light.

"I guess I'm the only gent who went to Cairo without seeing the sphinx. I had already seen Mr. Coolidge. The most interesting guy I met on the trip, during which I flew 12 days steady from near Singapore to London, was a fellow taking 500 cases of beer to China.

"I'd like to hear from that fellow. I'm going back home to Hollywood to make some pictures. Am I going to write a short history of China? Yes, very short."

CASEY TO GARB VANITY GIRLS

John M. Casey, city censor of beauty unadorned, went into a huddle with Acting Mayor Edward M. Gallagher today to decide what should be done about the costumes —or rather, lack of costumes—in the "Vanities."

Casey attended the opening at the Colonial theater last night and got an eyeful of feminine pulchritude unhampered by draperies.

He also got an earful about Mayor Curley and without waiting for his conference with the city council president, he notified Earl Carroll to delete all reference to the mayor from the revue.

It seems that in one sketch, an unsavory looking individual is taken for the Mayor.

"They can't do Mayor Curley or any other public official up with gangsters, "said Casey. "It won't be permitted and it won't again."

"Do you plan some changes in costumes?" he was asked.

"No," he said. "But I plan some costumes."

SHE'S 'THROUGH WITH FATHER FOREVER'

Oath Made Her Swear Blame on Brother, She Says; Lucas Flays Acquittal

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 9—Pale-faced Rose Allen, still rejecting her father's overtures of peace, today told why she took the witness stand against her brother, Edward H. B. Allen, last week, when the young steeplechaser was tried and acquitted for the shotgun murder of Francis A. Donaldson, 3d, society bachelor and Rose's suitor.

She declared her undying love for the man her brother killed. And she enthusiastically defended his closest friend, Albert Gallatin Lucas, the witness who also testified against her brother and who had been denounced in the courtroom as "that meddler Lucas, the man whose tongue really killed Donaldson."

"I was subpoenaed by the Commonwealth, and, under the law, I was required to appear," the 18-year-old debutante declared in a statement which she dictated and rewrote.

"As a witness, I was sworn to tell the truth, and I answered every question put to me," she said, explaining why she had told the jury her brother had threatened to "blow Donaldson's head off," several hours before the murder on the night of Nov. 9 in the Allen apartment at the Green Hill Farms Hotel.

THROUGH WITH FATHER

Rose went to her lawyer's office from the Allen home, where she avoids her father. She has been sleeping there since the trial, but the arrangement is not a permanent one.

She reiterated that she was "through with" her father, whom she blames for the tragedy.

There remains no doubt, however, of the sincerity of the reconciliation between Rose and her brother, Eddie.

The statement, which the girl edited and handed to her counsel, Elmer A. Schroeder, opened with the declaration that she had steadfastly refused to speak for publication until today, but that "I feel there are several things I must say."

"I dearly loved Francis Donaldson and he dearly loved me," she wrote. And then, telling of her relations with the wealthy young society boxer, relations which began when she was only 17, the girl went on:

GOLD RING LED GIRL TO DOOM

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (INS)—A shining bauble—a golden ring with the initials "D. L. V."—to attract childish attention, was believed today to have led little Dorothy Luts to her death at the hands of a maniac.

Her body was discovered, gagged, beaten and attacked, in a vacant house after a search lasting from last Wednesday when she disappeared. Footprints discovered near the body and the strangler's fingerprints marring the child's throat also may furnish identifying clues.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND WHERE STARR DIED

Long Beach, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP)—The body of an expensively dressed woman apparently in her early thirties was found in the surf today not far from the place where Starr Faithfull's body was discovered last year. In her pocketbook was a membership card to the Bronxville Woman's Club made out to Mrs. Adelaide Seick, Bronxville.

Examination indicated the body had been in the water about two days. No signs of violence were discernible.

The woman was of medium height, had reddish blonde hair and wore a platinum wedding ring.

The body was taken to an undertaking establishment in Rockville centre where the body of Starr Faithful was taken. Miss Faithful's body was found here last June and for months officials confined their investigations in an effort to determine definitely whether death was due to suicide, accident or murder.

Bronxville, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP)—The Bronxville Woman's Club has listed a member by the name of Mrs. J. H. Sieck living in the Rivermere apartment, Alger court.

At Mrs. Sieck's home it was said she was missing, but that no further information could be given out until the arrival of Mr. Sieck.

s that we would be married sometime before Christmas.

"Francis Donaldson was a gentleman, most courteous to and considerate of me at all times, and he was a man of very high character. I cherish his memory and I love him as much today as I ever did. To have lost him was a great blow which I can never forget.

DEFENDS LUCAS

"Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson, his father and mother, were always extraordinarily kind to me. I wish that I could be some comfort to them, for they indeed suffered with me a great loss.

"Francis A. Donaldson, 3d, was the image of his mother and father. I cannot find words sufficiently adequate to express what a wonderful mother and father Francis had and how openly they had taken me into their family.

"I realize that much has been said and written about me which is untrue and unfair. I have no desire in any way to appear before the public by writing newspaper articles or appearing on the stage.

"Reports which stated that my intentions were along these lines are entirely unfounded and untrue. I want to remain a normal life and endeavor to forget this terrible tragedy, but I must reiterate that I never could forget Francis Donaldson, the man I loved most in my whole life.

"Much has been said very unfairly about Mr. A. Gallatin Lucas, I feel that the public should know the facts of his position in this whole matter as I know them. I have known Mr. Lucas for about two years, and during that period of my acquaintance with him he always was a gentleman and a man of very high character.

"Now, when Mr. Francis A. Donaldson, 3d, and I went together to the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on the evening of Nov. 9, after I had left my apartment, we talked together and alone of my relations with my family. It was his thought, as it was expressed to me, that he would like to go see my father with the hope that friendly relations, which heretofore had been somewhat strained, might be established.

LUCAS HITS JURY

"Mr. Lucas had never taken a hand in any of the affairs between Francis Donaldson and me, and their bearing upon my relations with my family. Francis and I talked over the matter and then telephoned to Mr. Lucas asking him to come to the hotel.

"Mr. Lucas, who was his best friend, came, and we asked him to go with Francis to see my father because we thought that he might help in some way in establishing a friendly relation which Francis and I desired to have so much.

"After some persuasion, Mr. Lucas finally agreed to go, and I know that if he had not agreed to go Francis would have gone alone."

While Rose and her brother Eddie were receiving the congratulations of the horse loving society group in which they have a prominent place, the friends of the Donaldson family were condemning the acquittal of the young steeplechase rider as a travesty on justice.

"The day will come when Eddie Allen and his father will face a higher court than the criminal procedure of mankind," young Lucas declared. "That acquittal of Eddie Allen simply because he said he shot Francis Donaldson in self-defense was one of the most outrageous things that ever happened in a court of justice."

Meanwhile, the germ from which the whole tragedy developed was disclosed. That germ was Donaldson's use of the expression "I'm fond of Rose," when he father expected the man now dead to have said, "I love her."

CONFESSES TO FATHER

This happened at the family conference last August when Rose's relationship with Donaldson was discussed.

Donaldson's use of the word "fond" instead of "love" set in action the forces which resulted in his death at the hands of Rose's brother and her permanent estrangement from her father.

The conference was held after the debutante, motherless for four month, went to her ailing and choleric father, Horace Allen, and confessed:

"Father, there's something terrible I must tell you."

She confessed that she had spent a week end with Donaldson and her father demanded that she bring Donaldson to the Allen apartment for a talk. Ten days passed and nightly the elder Allen demanded why Donaldson did not come.

"Rose, tell Francis that it's imperative that I see him. If he doesn't come I shall see his father," Allen declared.

The following day, the elder Allen received a telephone call from Donaldson's father, Francis A. Donaldson, Jr.

"Francis will be at your apartment," the elder Donaldson told Allen. "Have you any objections if I come also?"

DAD SPURNS WOOER

The two fathers had known each other in both business and social ways. Young Donaldson's father was invited and that night the fathers, Eddie Allen and young Donaldson faced each other in the Allen library. Rose was present for a few minutes and then withdrew.

The two fathers expressed their mutual respect for one another and agreed to work together amicably to solve the situation in which their children were involved. Both agreed that marriage might well be delayed until young Donaldson had established himself in the business world.

Then the elder Allen turned to young Donaldson and remarked:

"Well, Francis, we've heard from everybody else, and, after all, you are the most concerned. What do you say?"

Donaldson is supposed to have mumbled some reply, and Rose's father demanded:

"Do you love Rose?" There was a long pause, and Donaldson replied in a tone which the elder Allen interpreted as grudging:

"I'm fond of Rose."

"The expression on Donaldson's face when he said that, along with his use of the word 'fond' instead of 'love,' convinced me that I would never want him to marry my daughter," Allen revealed to his intimates later. "I have the highest regard for his father, but I will not have that young man as Rose's husband."

"Rose walked out of the Allen apartment the night Donaldson was killed for reasons far different from those the jury heard from the witness stand," young Lucas declared today. "She will never forget the language of her father—and never forgive it."

2 TIE UP JURY

Two jurors who had used hammerless shotguns on hunting trips over the Montgomery County hills used their knowledge of firearms to delay for 10 hours the acquittal of young Allen, it was learned.

For hours, the two insisted to the other 10 jurors, two of whom were women, that Allen must have intended to shoot Donaldson, because it was necessary for him to deliberately release the safety catch on his hammerless gun before discharging the weapon.

On the first ballot, taken immediately after entering the jury room, eight voted to acquit Allen and four voted for voluntary manslaughter, a conviction which carries a sentence of from six to 12 years.

The two women on the jury voted on the first ballot to free Allen. They had made up their minds that he was innocent as soon as he had finished telling his story on the stand.

A second ballot, taken after a few minutes' discussion, showed 10 jurors voting to acquit Allen and two insisting that he must have deliberately released the safety catch and pulled the trigger.

They braced their arguments by pointing to the high point of the prosecution's attack—that Donaldson received the shotgun charge in the left side.

"You can't shoot a man in the left side if he's rushing directly at you, as Allen swore he did," the two kept repeating to the 10 who wished to free the prisoner. "Ever see a man rush at you sideways?" Finally they fell in with the majority and voted to acquit.

CREDIT LOAN RULES ARE SENT OUT

Washington, Feb. 9 (US)—With $650,000,000 immediately available for loans, the $2,000,000,000 reconstruction finances corporation today announced the procedure that borrowers must follow in applying for assistance.

Two circulars were issued, one for the information of railroads and receivers of railroads, and the other for financial institutions.

The circular issued for the railroads states that loans will be made only when the directors of the corporation are convinced that the applicant is unable to obtain funds through banking channels or from the general public.

Loans will be made to initiate an enterprise. Not more than $100,000,000 will be advanced to an applicant "at any one time."

In its circular for the instruction of financial institutions, the corporation sets out that it will make advances to aid in financing agriculture, commerce or industry, including facilitating the exportation of agricultural and other products, to:

Wife Dares Foes in Seattle Milk War

Seattle, Feb. 9 (AP)—Mrs. Jennie S. Burke, accompanied by a bodyguard, carried on her husband's milk route today despite his disappearance three days ago and her belief that racketeers, angered by his opposition to them, may have harmed him.

Burke had been warned he must give up the route, she said, and in November his truck was stolen and driven over a bluff and wrecked.

SMITH HALTS RUSH TO BACK ROOSEVELT

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.

Washington, Feb. 9 (INS)—There was almost complete cessation today of talk of nominating Franklin R. Roosevelt on the first ballot of the Democratic convention next June.

Alfred E. Smith's announcement that he would accept the nomination if it were offered him accomplished that much if nothing else.

While there are extremely few Democrats of any persuasion who believe that Smith stands a chance of being renominated, the opinion is general that his candidacy applies the brakes to the Roosevelt band-wagon, and makes the Democratic presidential contest a decidedly open affair.

The Roosevelt supporters in Congress—and there are many of them—now realize they have a fight on their hands. Until yesterday, they were openly boasting a nomination on the first ballot, or the second, but that talk disappeared today in the gusts of speculation over the Smith move.

DEADLOCK IS SEEN

Smith's statement on Monday that he would "make the fight" if asked to do so by the convention was something of a shock to the Democrats in Congress.

His later statement that he could not be considered an "active candidate," and his subsequent visit to Governor Roosevelt were somewhat puzzling.

They were asking themselves today, "What does it mean?" and getting no satisfactory answer.

But however the Smith position is interpreted, it was quite apparent to the leaders of all factions today that a combination of Smith and the favorite sons can block Roosevelt's nomination, and it was equally apparent that the Roosevelt contingent can block the nomination of Smith.

If both factions persist in their opposition to the end, it means a deadlocked convention and the inevitable compromise on someone else.

There will be 1154 delegates in the Chicago convention. It will require two-thirds, or 770 to nominate. The bed-rock minimum to block a nomination is 385.

HOW THEY LINE UP

A few minutes' work with pencil and paper were sufficient to convince the Roosevelt lieutenants that a combination of Smith and the native sons could easily control half the convention in the early balloting.

One such list follows:

Arkansas (Senator Robinson)—18
Connecticut (Smith)—16.
Delaware (Gov. Ritchie)—6.
Illinois (Senator Lewis)—58.
Kentucky (Senator Barkley)—26.
Louisiana (Huey Long)—36.
Maryland (Gov. Ritchie)—16.
Massachusetts (Gov. Ely or Smith)—36.
Missouri (James A. Reed)—36.
Nebraska (Gov. Bryan)—16.
New Hampshire (Smith)—8.
New Jersey (Gov. Moore or Smith)—32.
N. Carolina (Sen. Morrison)—26.
Ohio (Gov. White)—52.
Oklahoma (Gov. Murray)—22.
Rhode Island (Smith)—10.
Tennessee (Senator Hull)—24.
Texas (Garner)—46.
Vermont (Smith)—8.
Virginia (Gov. Byrd)—21.
Wisconsin (Smith)—26.

HELPS ALL CANDIDATES

This list totals 526 delegates, or almost half of the convention, and does noticlude Pennsylvania's big delegation, the second largest in the convention, in which both Smith ad Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, have many supporters. Nor does it include a number of other states where the candidacy of Speaker John N. Garner of Texas has been particularly appealing.

Unquestionably, there is some Roosevelt strength hidden in those favorite son delegations, North Carolina and Tennessee for example. But there is also Garner strength, Ritchie strength and some Newton D. Baker strength in them, too.

The plain point is, however, that the Smith announcement has stopped the headlong rush to what appeared to be a Roosevelt band-wagon. And in doing that, Smith has contributed very materially to the candidacies of all others, notably Garner, Ritchie and Baker. That, in any event, is the way Washington sizes it up.

BOSTON NOTABLES PAY TRIBUTE TO DR. NAHUM SOKOLOW

MAX SHOOLMAN CHARLES H. SHAW DR. SOKOLOW E. M. GALLAGHER WALTER S. GRANT

Head of world Zionist world organization, Dr. Nahum Sokolow, was guest of honor today at a breakfast in the Copley Plaza tendered by the city of Boston. Acting Mayor Edward M. Gallagher paid eloquent tribute to the distinguished visitor and the movement for Palestine that he leads. Present at the breakfast were 125 State and city leaders, including many of Dr. Sokolow's own faith. Among others at the head table were Max Shoolman, honorary vice-chairman of the American Palestine campaign; Comdr. Charles H. Shaw, U. S. N., representing the First Naval District; Dr. Sokolow, Acting Mayor Gallagher and Col. Walter S. Grant, U. S. A., representing the First Corps Area.

World Zion Head Honored by State and City

State and city officials and prominent members of his faith paid tribute to Nahum Sokolow, president of the World Zionist Organization in the Copley-Plaza today, at a breakfast tendered the distinguished visitor by the city of Boston.

The guest of honor and the Zionist movement were lauded in a speech of welcome by Acting Mayor Edward M. Gallagher.

OTHER NOTABIES PRESENT

Civic leaders and men well known in the philanthropic life of the city—125 in all—attended the breakfast, these including Judge Elijah Adlow, Rep. Philip Barnett, City Councillor Laurence Curtis, 2d, Sidney Dreyfus, Dr. Charles Linsky and Henry Yozell.

"Dr. Sokolow is known as a leading diplomat, a distinguished scholar, a famous author and editor," said Acting Mayor Gallagher. "He has been greeted by the foremost rulers and statesmen of the world and has interested them in the great ideals for which Zionism stands.

"The Zionist movement stands for the greatest Jewish ideal of modern times, the re-establishment of Palestine and the Jewish national homeland. Marvels have been accomplished already, all due to the Jewish people and their generosity.

"VERY REAL SACRIFICE"

"What has been accomplished represents a very real sacrifice, not only on the part of wealthy Jews but on the part of many thousands of poor people all over the world who have contributed generously to the cause."

No other events were scheduled for the Zionist president today. Tomorrow he will address the Lynn Rotary Club and the Massachusetts Senate and House. Sunday evening he will be guest at a banquet in Temple Ohabei Shalom, Beacon st., Brookline, opening the American Palestine Campaign for Greater Boston. Nationally the object of the campaign is a $2,500,000 fund for further development of Palestine.

NEVADA JOINS GARNER BOOM

San Francisco, Feb. 9—Democrats of Nevada today joined in the movement for Garner-for-President.

Throughout the State, according to messages received here by Dr. George Simonton, executive committee chairman of the San Francisco Garner-for-President Club, Garner is being favorably discussed.

"Wherever I go," wrote Roy E. King of Reno, "I hear of Garner, in hotels, restaurants, cafes and among farmers and others there is a deal of talk of his superior qualities for the Presidency."

King is to launch the Garner organization among the Democrats there.

DONAHUE PLANS SOLID SMITH DELEGATION

A conference of Gov. Ely, Senator Walsh and other Democratic leaders will be sought within 10 days by Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the State Democratic Committee regarding a campaign to elect a solid delegation from the State for Alfred E. Smith at the national convention.

Chairman Donahue stated he would not request the conference until a thorough survey of the situation had been made by the governor and Senator Walsh. He repeated, however, his great personal gratification at the favorable reaction throughout the State to former Governor Smith's declaration of his willingness to accept the nomination if chosen by the convention.

NUMBER OF DELEGATES

The question of delegates-at-large, whether the number finally proves to be 8 or 12 will also be considered. Chairman Donahue is now corresponding with Executive Chairman Jouett Shouse of the national committee, on his proposal to have the Massachusetts delegation consist of 30 delegates from the 15 new congressional districts and 12 delegates-at-large.

Smith's statement that he would not seek the nomination or campaign for it, but would accept it if offered by the convention had little effect on many of his supporters here. Until he has definitely announced he is out of the running, he is in the minds of many Democratic supporters the 46 years.

only logical candidate and they refuse to consider the qualifications of any other.

RITCHIE STRONG

At the same time Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, is strongly supported by many Boston Democrats, and it is generally believed he would show up much stronger than Gov. Franklin R. Roosevelt, of New York, in a canvass of Boston Democrats. Many Roosevelt supporters in the city are thought to be favoring him because of their friendship for Mayor Curley and not for his qualifications.

However, the announcement of Smith has apparently sidetracked much enthusiasm for the various candidates and turned the State Democrats toward a united front for Smith.

HONOR HEARST'S MOTHER

Radio Tribute Will Be Paid Feb. 18

San Francisco, Feb. 9—A tribute to the late Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, mother of William Randolph Hearst, in commemoration of her founding of the now nationwide Parent Teachers association movement, will be paid in a Pacific coast-wide radio broadcast scheduled for February 18.

Hugh Barrett Dobbs, more familiarly known to radio listeners as "Captain Dobbsie," will present the memorial broadcast.

The program will originate from station KFRC in San Francisco and will be carried over the Pacific Coast Columbia network.

The memorial program will signalize the 35th anniversary of the Parent Teachers Association's founding in San Francisco.

As in her many other noteworthy philanthropies, Mrs. Hearst consecrated herself to the organization of the movement which now numbers a million and a half members throughout the United States.

Dobbs will tell of the birth and development of the association and will also read the life of Mrs. Hearst. He will tell of her various humanitarian endeavors, notably her gifts for the expansion of educational and recreational activities at the University of California.

A poem, "The Voice of the Founder," will be inscribed to Mrs. Hearst's memory over the ether lanes.

DR. GARDNER'S STAND BRINGS CRITICISM

Dr. William E. Gardner's attack on the prohibition act and his plea for a return to temperance education with governmental control of alcoholic beverages was characterized as the "old-time personal liberty plea which would rule out all real temperance progress," by Dr. A. Z. Conrad, minister of the Park Street Church.

"It is very much to be regretted and most certainly does not express the opinion of the Protestant churches outside of the Episcopal church for one minute," Dr. Conrad said.

SCORES SOCIAL DRINKING

"It is a pity that our greatest enemy to our progress is within our own circle. His is a practical plea for social drinking, which is about the worst plea that could be made by anybody, as I read it and understand it.

"It is simply the old-time personal liberty plea, which would rule out all real temperance progress. We have practically the same thing to contend with from the same general source as in the days when we were working for prohibition."

Dr. Robert Watson, general secretary of the Lord's Day League of New England, declared:

"I think Dr. Gardner's difficulty is a confusion in his own mind on the difference between temperance and prohibition. Temperance is the individual's own relationship on what he eats and drinks.

DENIES TURN OF OPINION

"Prohibition is the action of the government, representing the majority of the people in making illegal the use, in this case, of alcoholic beverages as it has in other things, because the general use has been discovered to be detrimental to the welfare of the people.

"Further, the statement that the people of this country have changed their minds on the subject is not in accordance with the facts. There will be no thought on the part of the great mass of American people to change the law until the wets bring forward some plan that will appeal to the average intelligence."

HORSE DIES IN DEDHAM FIRE

A horse, a pony, five hunting dogs and a hen were found safe in the basement of a barn at 176 Curve st., Dedham, after an explosion and fire swept the structure, causing damage estimated at $15,000 last night.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, gained rapid headway when a case of ammunition exploded, blowing out a portion of one wall of the barn. Firemen were in constant danger as the air was filled with a hail of birdshot from the exploding cartridges stored in the building.

When firemen reached the scene Matthew McGuinan, contractor and owner of the barn, expressed the opinion that all the animals had perished. After the flames were extinguished firemen heard a dog's bark. They searched the ruins and in the basement found the animals, who had evidently fled there when the fire started.

CITY CONTRACT UNDER FIRE

Assignment of the 10-year ash and garbage removal contract by the successful bidder, the Brooklyn Ash Removal Co., to another firm was attacked in an order introduced at the meeting of the Boston City Council by Councillor Norton of Hyde Park.

The councillor said the Brooklyn concern has sublet the contract to the Coleman Disposal Co., which had the contract for the previous 10 years but was underbid in December when a new contract was made.

The Norton order calls upon Acting Commissioner of Public Works Christopher Carven to explain why he permitted the Brooklyn company to sublet the contract. Speaking of the order, Councillor Norton charged three of the five bidders for the contract were "straw bidbidders."

THE NEW HAVEN R.R.

SHOW GOES ON DESPITE FIRE

While about 1000 men, women and children viewed a performance in the Central Square Theater, Waltham, the Mercantile building adjoining it was swept by a fire that caused damage estimated at $5000.

The patrons of the theater were unaware of the fire yesterday until they left the theater at the conclusion of the performance. The fire started in the rear of the Central Square Cafe and was apparently caused by the overturning of a pot of fat on a stove in the kitchen.

The flames burned away a gas meter in the cellar, filling the place with fumes and forcing the firemen to use masks.

When the fire started, Mike Zografos, proprietor of the restaurant, his wife and waitress, Mary LeBlanc, were driven out of the establishment by smoke.

MALDEN POLICE SPURN CUT

A flat 5 per cent cut in the wages of all Malden city employes who are now receiving $1500 per year or more is proposed by the finance committee of the City Council, and letters asking the co-operation of all city officials and department employes were sent out last night.

At Malden police headquarters the letter was read to the patrolmen by Capt. John H. Aylward, who, after reading it, affixed his signature of approval. He then turned and held the pen expectantly towards the officers of the department. None of them stepped forward, so the letter and accompanying sheet for signatures of acceptance were placed on the bulletin board.

At fire headquarters Commissioner John H. Hannan put the letter on the bulletin board. Inquiry shows that so far none of the firemen have signed on the dotted line.

HUXLEY ON THE FUTURE; WARD GREENE ON THE SOUTH

By GILBERT SELDES

WHEN I WAS WRITING about the feeble English fantasists last week I made an exception of Aldous Huxley, because his "utopian" novel, "Brave New World," is certainly not feeble. I am one who has never completely enjoyed any novel of the future or any projection of Utopia since, as a little child, I read The First Men in the Moon, by H. G. Wells, and was fascinated by the egg-shell heads of the moon men. There seems to be something wrong about the formula of the novel of the future, something that reduces a smart, professional writer, like Owen Johnson, to impotence of the imagination (in The Coming of the Amazons), and which takes away from a warm-hearted and vigorous writer like Wells everything but his abstract ideas.

Gilbert Seldes

Beware Utopia

The theme of Huxley's new book is contained in a quotation: "Utopias seen to be much more 'realizable' than we used to believe. And we are now faced by a peculiarly distressing problem: How to prevent their realization . . . Perhaps an era will come when the intellectuals . . . will dream of escaping from Utopia and of returning to a society . . . less 'perfect' and more free."

In the brave new world children are born out of test-tubes and the words "mother" and "father" are indecent, although "modern" educators deliberately use them to show that they are liberal minded. Children are rocked to sleep (by radio), with "A, B, C, vitamin D; the fat's in the liver, the cod's in the sea," and people pray to Our Ford, who, for some reason, takes the name of Freud on special occasions. Even before they are born children are conditioned for their future work, some learning to hate the sunlight and most learning to enjoy the idea of death. The great immorality in this world is being devoted to one member of the opposite sex. For sex still exists, although it is dissociated from procreation.

Old Plot—New Idea

The usual utopian plot is used. Bernard Marx was badly put together in the laboratory and really fell in love with Lenina Crowne, who was, as she herself said, very pneumatic—which meant voluptuous in that time. With her he went to a reservation of savages and these savages, as you might suspect, are ourselves if we develop unscientifically and allow ourselves to have wars and depressions and private love affairs and all the other pleasures of our time. This is by far the best thing on the book, the parallel and contrast between the two civilizations. And, oddly enough, it makes me wish Mr. Huxley would write another Point Counter Point, because he doesn't need the mechanism of utopia to tell us how much he despises us.

Up From Slave-Holding

In the background of Ward Greene's Weep No More there is also a land that is not the South, when it was still inhabited by ladies and gentlemen. But Mr. Greene comes neither to bury nor to praise. He writes a story of today in a city which he calls Corinth, the same city to which Cora Potts returned and in which she is still a powerful and attractive figure. She only comes in to one of the many drinking parties. The regular drinkers are a group of young, married, and, to an extent, adulterous men and women. The only altogether decent people in the book are an Italian bootlegger and his wife, a southern girl seduced by a southern gentleman of her own class and thrown over by him in accordance with his standards of chivalry and family life.

Fast Work

Weep No More begins with a motor car screaming along a moonlit road and proceeds at this pace almost without interruption to the very end. It is an exciting book, and one of the prices Mr. Greene pays for his excitement is that his characters seem never to think. Most of them are exceptionally real, in spite of lacking this very human trait. About half a dozen of them are kept constantly in front of you in a crafty piece of literary juggling. Some of his men are cads and some fools, but Mr. Greene will probably be surprised to hear that he treats his women with southern hospitality. The only one of them who is asking to be called a dirty name is a girl who is returned to Corinth after 10 years in New York. So it is obviously up to Mr. Greene to write a book as good as this one about the people he has come to know since he arrived in the big city.

For the Tots

I am informed that A Prohibition Primer is meant to be funny, but the publishers do not say so and I think they made a mistake in illustrating the book with comic imitation woodcuts. Actually the book has a sound idea behind it, the idea which John Wesley expressed when he inquired, "Why should the devil have all the good tunes?" Why, in short, should the prohibitionists have all the good ideas for propaganda?

"All Good Men—"

The book is a simple and effective annihilation of the Anti-Saloon League's position. I do not think that it will be issued with the Third Reader to little children, but I think it ought to be left around the house so that they can pick it up and read it. My one regret is that on page 78 a chapter begins with the words, "Since, then, all good Americans are doing all that they can to get rid of prohibition..." "All" seems to me as false and as sanctimonious as most prohibition arguments, and there is no use in saying that you cannot be a good American if you are not trying to get rid of a system which we hope will ultimately be considered un-American. For the moment, it is the American system.

STAMPS TO COAX CASH OUT OF HIDING

Washington, Feb. 9 (INS)—More than a billion dollars of hoarded money will be ferreted out through a nation-wide house-to-house campaign if plans materialize as expected under the leadership of Col. Frank Knox, head of President Hoover's emergency organization to bring currency back into circulation.

Once exposed, a high-pressure drive is to be launched to convince the holders of this money that banks and modest investments are safer repositories than non-interest bearing mattresses, teapots and socks.

There are reports that something similar to wartime savings stamps may be issued as an inducement to coax this tremendous unproductive reserve out of hiding.

Col. Knox was perfecting his organization and his campaign today. He hoped to be ready with a definite announcement tomorrow. In any event, he promised "a specific and direct plan" to restore national confidence.

In the final analysis the Hoover emergency aid plans to boil his organization down to a community basis.

An army of 24,000,000 has been mustered to drive home this fact. That large figure represents the combined memberships of the civic, fraternal, patriotic, financial, labor, agricultural, banking and investment organizations which stand unanimously pledged behind the anti-hoarding campaign.

The heads of the 50-odd national organizations that responded to the President's mobilization call are to be formed into a national advisory committee, with Chicago as headquarters, under the Knox plan.

Police to Guard Elevated Payroll

Orders to shoot to kill were issued today by Superintendent Crowley to officers who will be assigned to guard Elevated paymasters while they are delivering payrolls.

Decision to hire a detail of police to guard each paymaster was reached by Elevated officials yesterday, and police were asked to supply the officers.

BEST CONTRACT HANDS

A series of selections by bridge stars of the best illustrations in their careers of precise bidding and excellent play. No. 2—Sidney S. Lenz.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—In the words of Sidney S. Lenz it requires rather precise play in bridge to know when a three spot is sufficiently high to pick up an adversary's deuce, especially in trumps.

Pianolas have their appeal to the novice, but the thrill of the master often comes in accurate defense that sets a contract. Here is a hand from a national tournament in which the lowly three-pot in Mr. Lenz's hand was a great factor in defeating the declaration:

NORTH
♡—K 7 3
◇—6 4 3
♣—Q 4 3 2

WEST
♠—J 7 5
♡—A 8
◇—10 7 2
♣—A 8 6 5

(Dealer) EAST
♠—A Q 10 9
♡—J 4 2
◇—A Q 8 5

SOUTH
♠—K J 3
♡—Q J 10 6 5
◇—K 4
♣—J 10 7

East bid one spade, South two hearts and West two spades, which became the contract. West's raise in spades is against the tenets of some systems, which would prefer a no-trump, except for the short suit in hearts with only one stopper.

The play:

Trick	South	West	North	East
1	QH	AHx	3H	5H
2	3H	5H	KHx	4H
3	JSx	5S	4S	10S
4	JH	7Sx	7H	9H
5	KSx	8S	6S	QS
6	10H	3C	9H	ASx
7	7C	ACx	2C	9C
8	KDx	JD	5D	2D
9	2Sx	6C	6D	2S
10	6Hx	3D	9D	8D

(x—Took trick. Next card led is immediately beneath.) The last three tricks were conceded to west and east, south having to lead a diamond or club to their high cards of those suits. But by that Lenz and partner had taken six tricks, enough to defeat the contract by one trick.

The accomplishment was due to the fact that Lenz established his long heart suit, forcing the declarer to trump till he had only the two spot of trumps left. And the three spot took that away from him. Then the six of hearts in Mr. Lenz's hand was good.

Here's a Good Wife, Robert Burns Style

London, Feb. 9—For a woman to win Poet Robert Burns' stamp of approval as a "good wife" she had to have the following qualities in 16 parts:

Good nature, 4; good sense, 2; wit, 1; personal charms, 1; and the rest in fortune, education, family blood, etc.

This was revealed by W. D. Fisher in a letter from Burns.

"One Dish Dinner" Simplifies Company Meal

Try This Novel, Inexpensive Dinner

Going to have a little dinner Friday night to celebrate Lincoln's Birthday? It helps a lot these days to seize every possible excuse for "a party"—and a Lincoln Supper would be novel and need not be expensive.

Friendship was the keynote of Lincoln's life—so, away with pomp and ceremony, phone your most intimate friends and plan for an informal evening together.

EASY TO SERVE

A "one dish dinner" is easy to serve, attractive to look upon and mighty good eating if the combinations are wisely chosen. Broiled chicken, Kentucky style, a steaming hot baked potato, some button mushrooms and half of a fat fresh tomato makes a festive appearance, served out in the kitchen on your best grill plates.

I hope they're the heat-proof glass ones that keep everything piping hot even tho there's an exasperating delay in folks getting "set" at the table.

And if you want to be sure the broiled chicken will fairly fall off its bones with tenderness, select a frosted broiler. The mushrooms may be frosted too, or perhaps you'll prefer some of the garden fresh frosted peas that go so well with chicken. Hot corn bread for supper will strike a new note and for a change, serve tea with your Lincoln Supper. For dessert, a strawberry frosted layer cake that we are making in the Martha Lee Cooking School this week. It's yummy!

WHITE CAKE WITH UNCOOKED ICING

2 cups cake flour, sifted.
3 tsps. baking powder.
1-2 cup shortening (butter preferred).
1 cup sifted sugar.
2-3 cup cold water.
1 tsp. vanilla.
3 egg whites (beaten light).

Cream sifted sugar and shortening. Sift flour once, measure and sift 3 times. Add water and flour alternately a small amount at a time, beat well after each addition. Add vanilla, then very gently add baking powder to beaten eggs and fold in. Bake in layers in moderate oven, 375 degrees, 20 to 25 minutes.

UNCOOKED ICING

1 cup fresh strawberries.
1 egg white.
1½ cups granulated sugar.

Beat the above ingredients with round egg beater until stiff (about 20 minutes.) This is a sufficient amount for a 2-layer cake.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

'ONE DISH DINNER' FOR LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

Broiled chicken, Kentucky style, a handsome baked potato, corn bread, tea and a strawberry frosted cake make a delicious "combination plate" dinner for Lincoln's birthday—or for the in-laws on Sunday. Try it this week.

Those Pepper Egg Noodles

½ oz. egg noodles in small pieces.
8 green peppers.
1 egg (hard boiled).
1 cup white sauce.
1 can mushrooms.
1 small can asparagus tips.
Buttered bread crumbs.
Salt and paprika.

Cook egg noodles until tender; drain. Cut tops from green peppers, remove seeds and parboil 8 to 10 minutes. Drain. Add finely chopped egg to white sauce, with salt and paprika to taste, mix sauce with egg noodles. Cut the asparagus tips and mushrooms into small pieces, but do not wash. Add to egg noodles, then fill peppers with this mixture. Cover the top of each with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (350 deg.) for 30 minutes.

Longer Life for Chiffon Hose

"The one big leak that keeps my pocketbook empty is chiffon stockings," wailed a member of our Brides and Business Girls' Cooking School. "I don't know what the matter is with stockings nowadays—I average sometimes two pairs a week, and sometimes I only wear them once or twice before there is run. What can the matter be?

Perspiration is bound to rot silk, hence the wise habit of rinsing your stockings as soon as they are taken off. It's so easy to sprinkle a few clear soap diamonds into a bowl of lukewarm water—(remember that too-warm water will change the color). A teaspoon of these transparent soap diamonds makes plenty of suds for one pair of stockings. Squeeze the suds gently through the stockings instead of rubbing—rinse well, using the same cupping motion.

Lenten Dishes at School

There'll be especially interesting demonstration lectures on Lenten cookery in the Martha Lee Cooking School this week.

Among the dishes that will be made—and sampled—will be Scotch Woodcock, Molded Halibut with Peas, fish turnovers, New York oysters, and a white feather cake with fresh strawberry fluffy filling and frosting.

If you can't get in, you can have a copy of this Lenten lesson sheet by dropping a line to Martha Lee enclosing a loose 3c stamp for return postage.

FLIERS AWAIT HAWAII BATTLE IN WAR GAME

Honolulu, Feb. 9 (AP)—Army pilots with the "Black" force defending Hawaii in the annual army-navy joint maneuvers were "on the line" today, awaiting the expected arrival of navy planes of the "Blue" force and the signal for an air battle over Honolulu.

When a hundred "Blue" fighters swept down out of the sky upon this island of Oahu Sunday and bombed the "Black" defenders in its the first real engagement of the "war," the island fliers were kept on the ground because the attacking air force was overwhelmingly superior. But today it was different.

This was because 12 army attack planes climbed into the sunlit Hawaiian sky at noon yesterday and breasted a stiff wind toward the island of Hawaii, a flight of nearly 200 miles. When they roared over Honolulu again at sunset on the return flight they had theoretically put out of commission 32 "enemy" sea planes found unmanned in the harbor of Hilo, a "Blue" base.

The army planes swooped down and attacked the seaplanes with bombs and machine gun—in theory, of course.

The surprise attack and its successful result—provided maneuver umpires agree with the army estimate—puts the island attackers and defenders on virtually an even basis in the air.

RESEARCH REVEALS ALL-BRAN RICH IN HEALTH-ELEMENTS

Helps Correct Constipation with "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Has Iron

Recent scientific research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation. It has "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.

These two important food-elements promote regular habits, and help do away with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy, so often the result of constipation.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is mild in action—much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using pills and drugs—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's daily—enough for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Besides, ALL-BRAN brings your body twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Equally tasty as a cereal with milk or cream, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Arbiters to Plan Rail Consolidation

Washington, Feb. 9 (US)—Joseph Widener and Jay Cook, Philadelphia, have been called as arbiters by the Pennsylvania and Reading railroads to finish consolidation plans for the two systems in Southern New Jersey, it was learned today.

The action was requested by Gov. Moore, with stipulation that the plans be completed in 90 days. The consolidation will include elimination of 237 grade crossings. It will cut operations costs about $1,100,000 annually.

FLOOD OF MAIL FOR PUZZLE EDITOR

Crossword puzzle fans already have the mail pouring in on the editor of the Boston Evening American's Patriotic Crossword Puzzle Contest, as the result of the first week's series ending.

With every mail letters arrived in bundles, and the deadline for mailing these is not until midnight tonight.

Meanwhile, the second series began yesterday and those who did not get aboard Series A in time began with Series B.

For the first series, which closed Saturday, a trip to Havana and a trip to Washington, with all expenses paid, were the two major awards offered, and there were many other valuable awards.

For this week, the awards are just as desirous, and crossword contestants are referred to the academic advertisement published elsewhere in this issue of the Boston Evening American.

As in the case of Series A, and the remaining weekly series in the six weeks' contest, the contestants are reminded that all six puzzles in each weekly series must be sent in TOGETHER and that the envelope must bear a postmark not later than 12 o'clock midnight on the Tuesday following the end of the series.

If you missed out on the first week, you can start today on the second. A list of awards, distinctive each week, is made up for each series.

Go to it—and say it with words.

Gov. Winant of N. H. on WBZ This Evening

Last week, for the first time since Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire began a year ago giving radio broadcasts from the State House, line damage caused by ice prevented his address from going on the air from WBZ. For this reason he has taken the same subject for his address tonight, as last week, and will be heard on "State Planning" at 6:15. Governor Winant's discussion of this subject is regarded as particularly timely in view of the nation-wide discussion now being given to the topic "State Planning."

Many Eyes Blacked in Battle of Oranges

Ivrea, Italy, Feb. 9 (AP)—Crowds battled in the streets here today and merchants boarded up their windows to protect them against showers of missiles hurled in the fray.

The missiles were oranges, imported by the wagonload from Sicily for this annual battle royal, in which all the townspeople participated. The battlers, men and women, pelted each other mercilessly and when the ammunition and their energy gave out they went home laughingly to treat black eyes and other minor hurts.

Strong, clear ice that lasts longer

Water kept in constant motion during the freezing process—that is the secret of the crystal-hardness, the longer-lasting quality of Boston Ice. "Still-water freezing"—you see its result in the spongy, cloudy ice cubes made in home-unit freezers—cannot produce the strong, clear ice that The Boston process brings you. Boston Ice, too, is made of four-times filtered water—no purer ice can be made by any process.

THE SECOND WEEK OF THE GRAND OPERA SEASON opened brilliantly last evening with the performance of "Tristan and Isolde," Frida Leider, Paul Althouse and Alexander Kipnis as artists. What an evening of sheer pleasure. When Frida Leider comes on the scene, we settle down in our chair and give our soul a treat, with the feeling of blissful confidence that every last note will be hit squarely on the pitch and sustained to the last zumm of the cello.

MRS. MORGAN BUTLER

How could there have ever been a more magnificent Isolde, so dramatic, so richly voiced, so superbly Wagnerian. Paul Althouse was a splendid Tristan, sincerely the actor and with a beautiful voice. Of Alexander Kipnis, it is enough to say that when he is on the program, no matter what the performance, the evening is completely successful for us.

All of the first-nighters were out for this popular opera. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich greeted their hosts of friends, Mrs. Goodrich in her usual conservative black and wearing rich furs. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wendall Endicott had guests in their box as usual, among them Mrs. Morgan Butler, charming in black. It was a sable evening, many of the ladies appearing in that popular color. One newly engaged couple we noticed, Miss Margaret Ford and her fiance, Mr. Stevens. She looked very radiant in dark evening gown over which was thrown an ermine wrap. Her husband-to-be is VERY handsome by the way.

Olgo Monks in Cool Green Jade Chiffon

OLGA MONKS OCCUPIED HER MOTHER'S BOX ATTENDED by her fiance, Mr. Hammond. She wore a cool jade green chiffon with white lace mantilla. We have always been curious to know if Miss Olga has the personality to express her picturesque style of costume. Her chaise lounge should be covered with a leopard skin and incense should burn in curious little brass jars in dimly lighted chambers. If she ever goes early Colonial we are going to scream out loud.

Personality Aplenty

MRS. JOHN E. THAYER, JR., arrived in rose velvet evening cape and Mrs. George S. West wore a gleaming golden gown which matched her hair. She is the most beautiful little lady in Boston with heaps of personality. Grace Cushing chatted with her group in a turquoise blue satin and Kitty Talbot strolled through the foyers on the arm of a swain. She was in dark red velvet, very becoming to her blonde beauty.

Real Devotee

MRS. EDWIN A. WEBSTER, such a lovely lady, was with a friend in the orchestra. She is an enthusiastic devotee. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft occupied their box with daughter Jane and a young group. Mrs. Bancroft was resplendent in flowered lame and Jane wore a black velvet dress trimmed with ermine. Fanny Hemmas was surrounded by youths, as was Elizabeth Wells. In brilliant red crepe with purple velvet jacket, Elizabeth Senife was escorted by a tall chap and we saw Isabella Lee in a group outside of the boxes.

Stars to Attend

WE RECEIVED A NOTICE from Miss Johnson, the pretty and able secretary of the Boston Morning Musicales, to the effect that many of the visiting opera artists and conductors will be present at the performance of John Charles Thomas tomorrow morning at the Hotel Statler.

What of Engagement?

EVERYONE IS INQUIRING what happened to Anne Bartol's engagement. She is in town and her fiance was seen in England and seemed very indefinite as to when he would return. If there is any news on the subject, we are listening.

Smartly Gowned

MET MRS. HERBERT H. HOLTON, Rosamond's mother, the other day. She was very smartly gowned in dark street suit with silver fox fur. She came to our rescue with a thin dime when we found that we were just that much short in purchasing a rare bargain in unmentionables. Was she trousseau shopping—we believe she was.

In Black Pajamas

MEMORIES HELD OVER from Saturday night: Mrs. George Cutts Vaughan and her husband dancing at the 300 Club in black satin pajamas with white satin straps for bodice. They dance beautifully together and we do NOT mean that walking and halting that so many men are trying to get away for dancing and evidently succeeding. What strange gyrations are offered in the name of Terpsichore? Elizabeth Hovey was present, also, noticeable in a red gown with silver sequins for bodice.

A Dancing Party

THE BIG FOUR, LORNA LIVERMORE, Martha Means, Barbara Young and Frances Gardiner, had a long line of stags waiting for them. We hear that this quartet are giving a little intimate dancing party in Byron st. next week, and what a good time will be had then. Lorna looked lovely in blonde lace. Barbara Young wore burgundy red crepe divinely. Martha Means' piquant beauty was enhanced with purple crepe, and Frances Gardiner's Emma Eames bob was set off by a bright red gown.

Al Jolson Rallies to Play Tonight

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 9 (AP)—Al Jolson, who was confined to his bed last night by influenza, resulting in cancellation of a performance of his show, "The Wonder Bar," said he would appear in the scheduled performance tonight and tomorrow matinee and night.

Many Stars Will Perform at Arena Event on Feb. 27

After a long chat with Miss Grace Madden, that ardent enthusiast of all things connected with skating, we are looking forward with most pleasurable anticipation to the Skating Carnival which will take place at the Boston Arena Saturday evening, February 27. Miss Madden, post-debutante daughter of the M. L. Maddens of Newton Center, left last week for Lake Placid, where her brother, James, is executing all sorts of beautiful figures for the old U. S. A.

The carnival is given for the benefit of the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, in Wellesley, of which Mrs. George H. Monks is president, also acting as chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the skating. Under her efficient direction a number of active workers are giving their time to the success of the pageant, among them Miss Anna W. Cutler, in charge of tickets, and who should be more capable after many years of that job for Vincent Club shows. Recruiting for, and taking charge of, will be the Junior League's charming president, Miss Dorothy Lawrence, and Mrs. Robert Tappan of Needham will handle the publicity.

On Committees

Mrs. Nathaniel Niles, wife of the well known half of a widely known veteran pair skating team which includes Mrs. Theresa Weld (Charles) Blanchard, is in charge of the costumes and general entertainment, the aforementioned Mrs. Blanchard, assisted by Mr. Richard L. Hapgood, programs; Mr. Frederick Goodrich, music; Mrs. M. L. Madden, housing for visiting entrants; Miss Grace, her daughter, the children's number; Mrs. Arthur E. Grannis, Jr. (Dorothy Weld, and Mrs. Blanchard's sister), liaison officer; Mr. James A. Tower, lighting and decorations; and Miss Martha T. Brown, fourteen-step (sounds fascinating, doesn't it?) committee.

One of the most intriguing numbers on the program will be that in which about 60 children will compete, exhibiting in fond parents and friends the steps they have been learning since the Boston Skating Club opened in November, under the skillful teaching of Miss Elizabeth Muller, the club's professional. Ranging in ages from 10 to 16 years, and costumed in brief skirts, "shorts" and sweaters of red, white and blue, they will perform intricate figures and steps in groups pairs and singly, finishing in the center of the ice with a formation of the American Flag.

Besides these small juveniles, there are many numbers on the varied program starring several Olympic competitors, representing France, Sweden Switzerland, Norway, Austria, England and the United States, and including names of a few who were seen in the same sort of affair two years ago, Sonja Henie of Norway, Earl Schafer of Vienna, Gillis Grafstrom of Stockholm, Fritzie Burger of Austria and our own Mirabel Vinson, Roger Turner and James Madden.

Co-operating with Mrs. Monks in arranging all the details of the carnival is the president of the Skating Club, Mr. Charles Morgan Rotch, and it is through him that the appearance of these famous skaters is made possible.

Among Subscribers

Many of the social world have already subscribed for boxes, among them: Mr. and Mrs. John S. Ames, Mrs. William H. Baltzell, Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Bayliss, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Bigelow, Mrs. Robert Stow Bradley, Mrs. David Cheever, Mrs. Roger C. Cutler, Mrs. Arthur E. Davis, Mrs. Rewall H. Fessenden, Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, Dr. and Mrs. George Monk, Mrs. F. S. Munroe, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Amory Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree, Mr and Mrs. Charles H. Rotch, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Royce, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Russell, Mrs. George P. Shepley, Mrs. Stephen Weld, Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Whitney and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Whiteside.

Other ticket holders include Mrs. William T. Aldrich, Mr. Edward W. Atkinson, Mrs. F. William Andres, Mrs. Charles B. Amory, Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon, Mrs. Nelson S. Bartlet, Miss Martha T. Brown, the Misses Helen C. and M. C. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. Philip P. Chase, Mrs. Greely S. Curtis.

Paderewski Plays to 16,000 For Charity

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—A master musician aided unemployed musicians to the extent of more than $25,000 last night.

Ignace Paderewski gave a piano recital before an audience of 16,000 persons in the Madison Square Garden auditorium, ordinarily devoted to sporting events.

The girl they talked about was charming, but—

"Weren't you shocked at Dorothy?" they whispered... "Why does she wear her underthings a second day? Everybody perspires a little and it's so easy to offend."

HOW can she take such chances with personal daintiness? Underthings constantly absorb perspiration acids and odors. These become noticeable so soon. Fresh lingerie each day is actually more important than the daily bath.

It is so easy to wear fresh things every day! For Lux is made to remove perspiration acids and odors completely, yet saves colors and fabrics, keeps them like new. And it takes only four minutes or less.

Follow this dainty habit—Lux your underthings and stockings after every wearing. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

Underthings absorb perspiration. Avoid offending... Protect daintiness this way:

Wash this 4-minute way: 1 tablespoon of Lux does 1 day's undies—stockings, too! Squeeze suds through fabric, rinse twice, shake.

EXCELLENT TRIO OF COMEDIANS FEATURED IN "VANITIES"

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Minute Miniature

Mayor James M. Curley thinks there's "nothing like a good boiled dinner—corned beef and cabbage"...Looks forward to enjoying the thick steaks, served two evenings a week, at Jamaicaway dinnertable...Reads a great deal of Shakespeare...Partial now to reading biographies and histories...Says there never were so many good ones on the book mart as there are now...Names Dumas and Hugo as his favorite authors...Loved the new "Napoleon" and "Bismarck" biographies...Pleased as anything because his young son, George, is developing the same taste for reading as His Honor has...Reads in bed, for one hour, before turning out his reading-light each night...Reads one hour every morning as soon as his eyes are open, before he hops up for the day...Has never had a yen to "act"...Too old, at fifty-seven, to begin to think about such things, he told us...And when we suggested it might bring a lot of money to his unemployment fund if a Shakespearean play was staged with the Mayor as Mark Antony and Frank Donoghue, Casino star, as Cleopatra...Not a bad idea. But it would mean more box-office with Frank Sinatra"...And that, folks, is a minute's worth about our mayor.

Listening and Telling

The blonde sister of the Jaynoff Sisters is so bashful that the continual putting her hand in front of her face, while she was in the spotlight at the Grove last Radio Night, was really on the level!...So Nick "Getting-an-Earful" Keeney, in Thursday's Mirror, thought our Lopez story sounded like "a blighted romance, eh?"...There's no doubting his power, Nick! You've got us there...Sally Vine is one "voice" and earnest-of-purpose performer who should be getting a better break...There's a sad romance back of Sally singing grand tunes with that something in her voice that makes you think...We'll tell you about it some day.

Ernie's Girl Friend

You Tell Us

Why wouldn't the "Robin-Hood" couple, at the Bal des Artistes, let their names be printed?...What benedict impresario keeps track of how he can name the different brands of kisses?...What lyca columnist fills his pockets with sugar lumps every chance he gets?...What local dance artist has a new toupee?...What organist is billed as "New England's Master Organist"?...What daily pillar is being shoved through a wringer by hands?...What local singer owes plenty bills, with credit N. G.?...What's razzberries to the sound whooping coughing it with apparently no remedy being applied?

Snooping Here and There

There's a good reason why Chestnut Hill's Alma Weichel claims horseback riding is her favorite pastime...And Lee Wines, "Oak Square Playboy of Brighton," fondly called by his State st. friends, is impatient to be off for his annual Southern journey trek...But there's a reason he's wintering up North...Here's another popular "Dottie" Glancey's lovely shin and long, dark lashes? She's one girl in the beauty business who needs no artificial aids...Ted Winthrop's Gordon Bonsford, not content with being a prize-winning drum major, has converted a bevy of his neighborhood cronies and is whipping an orchestra into shape, we hear...

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

It has almost become a habit with the layman to complain of the persistent lack of variety in musical revue. Only in rare instances have the builders dragged themselves away from the fixed formulae of the best doctors, chief among whom are Mr. Ziegfeld, Mr. White and Mr. Carroll. There was an urging temptation, therefore, to take Mr. Carroll's eighth installment of "Vanities" at the Colonial last evening and declare on the spot that except for names, places and dates one "Vanities" is just a twin sister to all the rest. This would hardly be fair to Mr. Carroll, however, for while he has clung desperately to his own fashion in these things, he has mixed his arts and his nonsense into as good a laugh entertainment as you will find in many a day.

This "Vanities" was not as closely related to Mr. Carroll's former expositions in humanity

unadorned as you might have been led to expect. Yet it was fairly true to form. It was not, when its fu share of dancing, parading and posing ensembles; it relieved for the moment when the time had arrived for the checking in of a sketch more reasonably gay children was at least artistic of darling. But Mr. Carroll's selected crop of beauties did not command the eye. The best of the principal comedians did that. Mr. Chase, the vegetarian, nearly brought a hush to the proceedings as he stowed away matches, a mutilated cigar and cigars lighted on both of him. Rather in the order of burlesque, of course, but extravagantly funny. Mr. Williams, too, made much of his constantly recurring miseries in sketches calculated to tickle the imagination and stir speculation.

On the fairer side of the picture, Miss Ryan found the Colletts sisters to supplying the glories of the dance and spicing it with songs and, to the end of breezy nonsense. Supplementing these tireless toilers was Vivian Fay, a graceful maiden who faithfully attended to the more classical grades of bodily motion.

There is no mistaking an Earl Carroll show without the usual program information as a guide you would recognize "Vanities" as a creation of the Carroll workshop. All its arts and graces bear the bold imprint of headquarters, and its broad humors glaringly so. However its qualities may be reckoned in a theater demanding more than mindless thing "Vanities" will be remembered as a really funny entertainment not bothered too much with morals.

Copley Offers Strong Drama

"Young Woodley" came back to Boston with a warm and deserved welcome last night, when Glenn Hunter and his sympathetic supporting cast presented John Van Druten's drama of young love and disillusion at the Copley Theater.

The play grows more poignant and more enduring with each performance as the players pave last night. It is the simple story of adolescent love as symbolized to a young student at an English public school in the alluring and quixotic form assumed by the beautiful wife of his headmaster.

She means something by an impulsive kiss, but young Woodley means more. It is to her confusion and to his tragedy that the kiss is misunderstood.

Glenn Hunter's performance is sensitive and moving. Amy Lamonia, as the enticing but understanding wife of the professor who is more concerned with discipline than with human values, is completely charming. Miss Loomis long ago proved herself an artist; this role is worthy of her full talents.

Francis Compton plays the important role of the arrogant professor with only one fault; he is too attractive as a personality to convincingly treat as forces students of the harassed young Woodley.

last week, and I thought she looked lovely in a dark red velvet dress. She has dropped the name of Alison Lloyd and entirely forgotten it. Comedy, after all is her metier, and the Lloyd name set, acquired to give her dignity as a dramatic actress, is a bit of nonsense. 'Corsair' will not add any to her fame.

Unfair to Peggy

The red-haired Peggy Shannon, who a year ago was exploited as Clara Bow's successor, has a new contract. She has finished at Paramount and has been freelancing but now she goes to Fox for two pictures. I have always thought it unfair to Miss Shannon that she should have been used on her screen career as a successor to Clara Bow. Neither personality nor her personality made it necessary to exploit her as a substitute. Her first picture for Fox will be "Society Girl" opposite James Dunn.

Sterling Show at Scollay

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Out of an unusually generous bill, both as to quality and quantity, there steps a rarely gifted lady, quite petite and very attractive, to stop the show and "bring down the house."

The little lady is Ewing Eaton, who starts in so softly that one gets surprise after surprise as her greater arts are revealed. She is a hard worker, for she doesn't tire of showing new tricks as the audience applauds and applauds. She sings, dances, plays musical instruments, does acrobatics,

Chappelle and Stinette, from Harlem, also capture the plaudits. Proving that "color" never dims the way audiences like to see stars shine. There is abundant room on the bill for one of the laugh acts is that of Ray Conklin, ventriloquist. He is a corker, but he annoyed slightly more plaudits when he brings on our old friend Art Spaulding, as his "dummy."

Loring Smith & Co. have an excellent sketch, "Waisting at the Church." The Sutcliffes present a Highland revue, to the great delight of the patrons. Comedy patter comes from Arthur Silliard and Mona Martin. The Dancing Rockets, the Scollay's snappy chorus, appear in three fine numbers, and "Dr." Spaulding is a new triumph in his song festival.

Miss Dietrich Wins Laurels

By HARRIS MORGAN

Marlene Dietrich is the Fine Arts screen's magnet this week. Her vehicle is a German silent film, made, of course, before Hollywood lured her from home. The movie is now titled "Three Loves," this and the synchronized music being the only changes time hath wrought in the production.

We journeyed out to the Fine Arts with the double purpose of enjoying the rare treat of a "silent," and of hearing the marvelous Marlene of the pre-talkie era. To her credit it can be stated that she is the chief asset of "Three Loves," she less also is everything and everybody about her. If this Miss Dietrich were the most of it. She would make almost any crowd dwindle by that comment. She is one and when we may glibly set down as movie "it."

Story and direction do not measure up to the German standard.

Shimmy Queen Hit at Howard

There is good burlesque at the Old Howard this week, together with vaudeville and talking pictures. The star is the clever dancing naughty Peaches, known as the "Sheba of Shimmy." The "Follies of Pleasure" company is a show supplied with girls and funmakers. The comedy honors are shared by Slim Fields and "Chuck" Ca shaw. Jean Gaskell, Tiny Huff and the Bower sisters are featured.

RELIEF DRIVE SPURRED FOR FINISH

A check of all business firms in the city was launched by the Lord Boston Unemployment Relief Campaign committee today in an effort to wind up the $3,000,000 mark within the next few days.

At the same time efforts were launched to secure contingent gifts amounting to $100,000 which will be added to the grand total when the contributions secured reach the $2,900,000 mark.

DONATIONS LAG

Campaign leaders expressed disappointment last night at the receipts yesterday which amounted in all to $1,940.46. This sum brought the grand total of the drive to $2,716,958.56, leaving slightly less than $200,000 to be secured.

The opinion was expressed that some business concerns which might reasonably be expected to contribute have thus far been delinquent. The committee is confident, however, that these firms will make returns within the next few days.

The committee on industry and finance is expecting donations from firms which have not yet been listed as contributors. Some trade groups have also not donated as was expected and the committee is hopeful their contributions will be received in the next few days.

WARD FIGURES OUT

Chairman C. F. Weed of the campaign committee last night stated that yesterday's results were not up to standard but that a better day seemed apparent today.

Total contributions from the city's wards thus far amount to $2,500,000. Two wards have more than doubled their quota while several others have practically reached the allotment set for them. The contributions from the various wards thus far are as follows:

Ward 1, $4657; 2, $3,200; 3, $4,500; 4, $22,972; 5, $190,000; 6 and 7, $11,067; 8, $182,85; 9, $111,128; 10, $5,041; 11, $2190; 12, $448.21; 13, $7,435.50; 14, $2359.29; 15, $5470; 16, $3654; 17, $13,508.13; 18, $9085; 19, $4600; 20, $3709.40; 21, $452.95; 22, $10,328.87.

GOODS RUSHED TO BRITAIN

Exporters are rushing their consignments to England from this port and others along the Atlantic seaboard to escape the payment of the heavy duty which goes into effect in that country on March 1.

Among the sailing dates of steamers which have been announced is the Wilma County of the Criole Lines, due to sail from here for Manchester and Liverpool on Feb. 11, instead of Feb. 28, and already 1290 tons of cargo has been booked for this vessel. On the steamer Quaker City of the American Hampton Roads Line, which sails on Feb. 14 for London, Hull and Dundee, 1500 tons of cargo has been booked.

It was learned that some of the exporters, who have been sending small lots to Great Britain during the year are now shipping as a result of their plans to escape the new duty. It is expected that the shipments from Boston during the next two weeks will be the heaviest for some months.

Woburn to Abolish Municipal Berths

Several minor municipal jobs in Woburn are to be abolished, according to Mayor Alfred W. Peterson. One is inspector of slaughtering, with a salary of $1000 per year and another is inspector of animals with a salary of $250 per year.

GREATER BOSTON NEWS

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

SECOND SECTION

BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1932

THIS IS LIFE

BAY STATE SURELY SMITH'S LOCAL G. O. P. HAS DUTY TO PERFORM ELSEWHERE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

IF ALFRED E. SMITH wins the Democratic nomination it seems to me that the duty of the Massachusetts Republicans is plain. No power on earth can keep Massachusetts out of the Smith column. If he could win, even barely, four years ago, he should have no difficulty in carrying the state this year. And it is safe to say that he will carry the chief state offices with him for the Democratic party.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The Republicans have no material at hand with which to stem the tide. Granting that even the Angel Gabriel running on a Republican platform could not be elected governor this year against a Smith landslide, it is needless to say that the Republicans have no Angel Gabriels available. A weaker collection of aspirants for high office has not been seen for a long time.

Little Hope for Bay State G. O. P.

Since this is true, the Republicans need carry on only a perfunctory campaign. Any candidate will do to be beaten, the lieutenant-governor as well as another. Two years from now perhaps Mr. Bacon will have grown sufficiently in the public eye to make him a candidate worth supporting. But not this year.

But that does not mean that the money and energy of the Massachusetts Republicans need be wasted. Even if they give up Massachusetts, spend the minimum of time and energy upon it, they can very usefully lend the Republican national committee their man power and money for service elsewhere.

They cannot have failed to notice how—except in Massachusetts—the reception of Mr. Smith's announcement has been very cool, not to say cold. The South does not like it at all. The chief Democratic newspapers in all sections of the country are cagey, reluctant, disappointed, almost alarmed. There is no fan-fare of congratulation and welcome. There is a dubious admission that Mr. Smith is well within his rights. And the Democratic office holders in Washington are even more frank about the situation. They do not like it.

That being so, there will be many a doubtful state where Massachusetts Republican money and organizing ability will come in handy. The party here needs to get back into the good graces of the national committee. In an admittedly Democratic year a few states saved may mean the difference between a whitewash and a respectable showing, even a bare victory. For, as I have said before in this column, I can not believe that the opposition to Mr. Smith will be any less than it was four years ago—and for the very same reasons.

It was Bulwer-Lytton—wasn't it?—who said in a famous parliamentary speech during the Crimean War: "Destroy your party government and save your army!". So one is inclined now to say to Massachusetts Republicans: "Let your state go and concentrate on the nation!"

Democrats Wary of "Another Bryan"

But it is quite possible, of course, that Mr. Smith will not secure the nomination. The openly expressed feeling on the part of many influential Democrats that they do not wish to tie themselves up to another William Jennings Bryan, plus the absurdities of the two-thirds requirement, may allow the nomination to swing to another who does not share Mr. Smith's disabilities.

In which case the chances of the Democrats throughout the country would be far better, but the chances of the Republican party in Massachusetts would likewise be better. Not if the regular Smith vote could be delivered to the man who takes his place. Not even, perhaps, if the Democrats nominate a decently strong slate against the expected Republican slate.

But there is one possibility which the Republicans cannot afford to overlook. The Massachusetts city Democrats, in their sharp disappointment, are just as likely to double-cross any candidate who in their estimation spoiled Smith's chances for the nomination. The professional city Democrat is an interesting animal, perhaps the most interesting in the political zoo.

One would suppose that it would be his most cherished desire to knife the enemy from the front. But that desire seems always complicated by the equally strong desire to knife an ally in the back. There is not an important Democratic politician in Massachusetts who has not at one time or another suffered from that pleasant habit. And if the New York Democracy did not knife Mr. Smith in the last election, it is rather difficult to understand exactly what did happen.

Hoover's Prospects Brighter

If Mr. Smith does not receive the nomination, therefore, let the Massachusetts Republicans lift up their hearts, perk up, and make good cheer. They may have allies they wot not of.

All in all, things appear to be looking up, that is from the point of view of one who likes a strongly fought election. Mr Hoover is undoubtedly gaining a bit of strength, so far as internal politics is concerned. People are a little more hopeful about him than they were. It may be his foreign policy, rather than his domestic, that will decide the issue, after all.

The Democratic nomination is no longer a walkover for Gov. Roosevelt. Mr. Smith's intervention may have interesting consequences for those weaker brethren, Gov. Ritchie and Mr. Baker. And Speaker Garner, if Mr. Smith grows stronger, may well develop astonishing strength in the South. His position is markedly strategic.

It is a little difficult to see why Senator Walsh and Gov. Ely cling so firmly to Mr. Smith's leaking craft. They reason, probably, that it is strong enough to support them in Massachusetts and that they had better win with Smith in Massachusetts than take what must remain a slightly doubtful chance with the Democracy at large. As to that, time alone will tell.

SCHOOL PROBE LAUNCHED IN DORCHESTER

Transfer of Children to New Building Meets Stiff Opposition

The Boston school committee today will launch an investigation of charges that pupils of the Thomas Kenney elementary school, Neponset, were ordered from the building at noon and forced to eat cold lunches in the yard, made at a public conference of the committee with representatives of Dorchester civic organizations.

The charges were made by Mrs. Mary Murphy, and her statements were corroborated by Peter O'Hara of Neponset, who mentioned the Kenney school. Joseph J. Hurley, of the school committee, expressed surprise at the charges, and said it was the first knowledge the committee had of such conditions.

PROMISES REMEDY

He promised that the matter would be immediately remedied and other members of the committee supported him in condemning the practice. It was intimated that a lunch attendant would be assigned to various Dorchester schools.

The conference was held as a result of the committee's decision to fill the new Woodrow Wilson intermediate school next fall by transferring pupils from the Minot and Mary Hemenway schools. Representatives of Dorchester civic organizations and parents of children involved were present at the conference.

LONG WALK CITED

Main objections voiced to the transfers were that the children would be forced to walk long distances to school, would have their school life disrupted and associations broken and would be forced to eat cold lunches because of the short noon hour.

Mrs. Murphy advocated an addition to the Kenney school citing the ages of the pupils there, 10 and 11 years. She pointed out the long walks made necessary by the transfer would injure the health of the children. The Roberty Council, K. of C., endorsed her appeal for an addition to the school.

A petition, signed by 2000 parents protesting the transfers, was also presented at the meeting. Various speakers urged reconsideration of the move.

ENJOY BELATED WINTER SPORTS SEASON

What a thrill! A dog sled ride right out in the open country of New Hampshire. The photographer met Miss Agnes Sheehan, of Stoughton, on the snow party near Lincoln N. H.

New England folk waited a long time for winter sports. The spring-like touches—the lack of snow and no real zero touches—just set skiing, dogsled rides and bobsled thrills to one side. The snow of last week did the trick. The season opened with a bang. Miss Edith Martinette, Somerville, took the trip North just to try out her skis. (Staff photos.)

30 OFFER BLOOD TO CHILD

More than 30 residents of Revere, including members of the police and fire departments and pupils of the Immaculate Conception school, responded to an appeal for volunteers for a blood transfusion to save the life of 6-year-old Paul Fitzmeyer of Winthrop ave. who is at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary for an operation for a mastoid.

When the tests were completed it was stated that three of the group had passed successfully. They are Patrolman Maynard Rogers, William Kilcourse of Revere, and his son, Charles. The three are friends of the Fitzmeyer family. Lieut. Joseph Smith and Private John J. Dyer, Jr., of the Revere fire department had tests taken and it is expected that theirs will also prove satisfactory.

WOMAN IN FIRE PERIL SAVED

Ill in bed when fire broke out in her home today, Mrs. Mary Pino was rescued from the smoke-filled tenement at 855 Saratoga st. East Boston, by Patrolman William Hart.

The fire started in the kitchen of the Pino home on the second floor and the room where Mrs. Pino lay was filled with smoke.

She tried to find her way out, but was unable to see, and stumbled and fell. Hart ran through the house, seeking occupants as soon as the fire was discovered and, finding the woman, carried her to the street and to a neighboring house.

Damage by the fire, which was caused by a defective chimney, was estimated at $500. The first floor is occupied by Peter A. Sharon and family and the third by Stephen Pino and family.

HUNT SPREADS FOR STUDENTS

Search for the two Harvard business school students, missing since Jan. 31, extended today throughout the country and to Havana, Cuba, as police checked various clues.

Descriptions of the youths, Nathaniel E. Jones, 23, of Billerica and Floyd Stewart, 23, of Garden City, Kan., were broadcast over the radio by police and will be sent to hundreds of cities throughout the country today.

Searchers had previously checked at Hanover, N. H., in the belief the pair attended the Dartmouth winter carnival last week-end, but the hunt was fruitless. It is now thought possible they may have set out for there and met with an accident in the many back roads with which Jones a former Dartmouth student, is familiar.

It was also believed they may have gone to Lake Placid for the winter Olympic games and officials there will be asked to make a careful search.

POLICE SEEK 3 PUNCH-BOARD RACKETEERS

Radio Dealer Fleeced as He Falls Prey to "System" of Confidence Gang

Prize boxers, listed on a punch board, cost a Brighton radio dealer $25 police revealed today, after working on this newest kind of swindle since Friday.

The victim, Jacob Adelman of Beacon st. Brighton said he left the cash to two of three men and was writing a check for further losses of $75 when his business partner broke up the game.

It all started when a new system of punch boards left a board in Adelman's store in spite of the latter's refusal to buy it.

A few minutes later two customers entered talked of radio for a time and then interested themselves in the board.

The board was made up of sealed tabs, the lifting of which reveals to the player whether he wins or loses on the fighter he selects from a card. The prizes varying odds from even money to 21 to 1.

Adelman was successful at first in "hitting" a few and decided to buy. Luck of the two players shifted and he rapidly lost. The tabs were later found arranged in a manner that would be known to one familiar with the board.

When Adelman's losses reached the $100 mark he paid the $25 in cash and was writing a check when his partner entered, and questioned the honesty of the game. The two strangers then stalked out in indignation.

Police believe the board salesman and the two players were working together on the scheme.

MICKEY IN UNIFORM

Corporal Michael Fitzpatrick could hardly wait until Saturday morning to strut before his admiring companions in his bright new uniform. Breakfast was hardly over before he gathered up his nightstick put his cap on at an angle of a sort and sauntered forth. His father had not been home all night so he missed the morning ritual of a hearing and an admonition to be a good boy.

So he strolled down toward the corner a brave little figure who might have been anything in Lilliput, twirling his stick as big as a policeman and imbued with the authority of a dozen captains. He had gotten midway down the block when a car long, sleek black with side curtains drawn to the curb. Two men pinch backed coats and derbies sat at the same angle, jumped out.

"Hello!" exclaimed Mickey proudly.

"Say dad—you know, the Chief—told us to pick you up—we're goin' on a raid," said the second.

"Whatcha goin' t'raid?" asked Mickey, striking a pose, one hand behind his coattails, the other swinging his nightstick.

"We got a big raid on—come on!" the first dapper-dressed young man caught Mickey by the arm.

"S-s-s-ay!" exclaimed Mickey, drawing back. "Where's yer badge—are you dicks?"

Both threw back their coat lapels and displayed badges which were quickly covered. Mickey looked at them admiringly. But he would not be manhandled for this. He drew back.

KIDNAPED IN AUTO

"Take yer hands off'n me," he said, with dignity. "I'll get in—where's my dad?"

"He's at the place we're goin' to raid," said one of the dapper young men. "Hurry up."

"Make it snappy—we ain't got much time," seconded the other.

Mickey looked around to see whether anyone had witnessed this recognition of the authority. But he saw no one. He climbed into the car. The two young fellows sprang after him and jumped in behind him. The door slammed. The chauffeur, half looking back, muttered. Click! Click! Click!

BOOKS

BY Charles H Towne

Do you remember the old game we used to play called "Go on"? A group would sit shoulder to shoulder in a row, and the first speaker having invented a bit of scandal, it was passed breathlessly to the next, who started a distorted version of the story in turn through the set intent to the last.

A great many lessons are supposed to have been taught by this enlightening game. But the other day I was the recipient of some news concerning an old friend which would have caused me to scout the believing any one else told it to me. I had not a reason to credit it seriously to more than a rumor.

At luncheon I sat next to a famous lady novelist and we fell to talking of ancient acquaintances. The name of a married pair turned up who had been divorced a few months after their wedding. They were both writers and it had been said at the time that there had been a serious clash of artistic temperaments and most of us knew them well enough to know that it was all true at that.

It was perfectly understandable in the circumstances. Indeed I had all but forgotten the odd episode of the separation or thought of it as of a thing that had no further interest for me. Moreover, it was none of my business.

But suddenly I heard Mrs. A. saying:

"You know I always sympathized with Mr. R in that little dispute."

"Indeed?" said I, but still not vaguely interested.

"Yes. You see I was this way. Mrs R. was well known as a writer and therefore it follows that she was a poor housekeeper. I didn't quite follow me but I had known several times women who have been models of neatness. But I had the impression were not to drag them in. And when they married, my information went on, Mr. R engaged the most impossible Finnish maid. An awkward sullen lot servant if ever there was one. Well one evening Mr. R returned to the house a famished bridegroom hoping to settle down for a time with his wife. But he found both the husband and wife to see all the stories they could to keep the household going. And this was one of the direst ways of saving on his grub-end. He asked his wife to have a perfect dinner.

"The editor came. But that Finnish maid, in moving around the table and serving, managed to spill down the editor's back. He was so furious that he left the house and never returned to it. And what is more, he never again bought a story by either husband or wife."

I had listened with growing attention as the story went on. Both name of the couple were in the game we used to play and I felt that Mrs A was not the final speaker when we all had sat around the parlor awaiting the players version of the original farce.

"My dear lady," I said "the most elegant tale grew into legend a few years pass until the person distorted. For you see Mrs R did not keep house. Her husband had taken her to what we used to call a fashionable boarding house over in the Chelsea section of New York because they couldn't afford a menage of their own. The editor was not famous because the editor was 2—but a poor young rich assistant on the old Smart Set, and Mr R and Mrs R were not trying to sell their stories to us—we, on the contrary, were trying to get all we could from their reluctant pens. And the maid was not Finnish she was colored. And it caused dramatics in it was not smashed potatoes she spilt down the editor's back, it was soup. And—" I paused again—the editor didn't leave he stayed on laughing at the incident. Moreover he returned many times, until the affair was grandstall.

I never heard another word I hear she or he.

"A good version. I said and aren't your minutes now with Mrs R?"

"Decidedly," he agreed. And that was that.

Reading is many books; as I do these days I know not whether that volume seldom come from the presses of even our best publishers which do not contain various typographical errors. When reminds me of the two old priests up Boston way who years ago determined that a certain brochure they wrote on Henry Wadsworth Longfellow should be free from such blemishes

They read their proofs with a eye-glass. Then over went a microscope out and went through it line by line and when they reached the end they declared, as one, "At last there shall be a perfect volume! ured!"

But, careful as they had been, somehow they failed to read the proof of the title page pronouncing that not a typo was in it. To their horror when the bound volume came to them they eyes beheld this in bold beautiful Gothic type

Marry-Go-Round

MODERN GIRL HAS NO USE FOR HALOS

By HELEN ROWLAND

FORTUNATELY, no man marries a girl under the delusion that she is an angel, nowadays. Because the modern girl has no intention of spending her days trying to keep a halo on straight.

"She who dresses for others besides her husband," said Euripides, "marks herself a wanton." But, alas, what real inspiration is there in staging a picture show for a blind man?

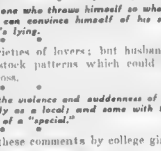
An artist at love-making is one who throws himself so wholeheartedly into his role that he can convince himself of his sincerity—even when he knows he's lying.

There are a hundred varieties of lovers; but husbands come in just three or four stock patterns which could be packed and shipped by the gross.

Some men make love with the violence and suddenness of an express train; some as treasonably as a local; and some with the charm, smoothness and variation of a "special."

It is amusing to read all these comments by college girls on how to choose the Ideal Husband—considering that a husband is not a matter of choice (as they will soon discover), but of chance, accident or blind luck.



A man doesn't always break his good New Year's resolutions. He sometimes just leaves them lying around unused until they fall apart from neglect.

Economic equality: Keeping your nose to the grindstone all day—and then coming home and keeping it powdered all evening. Ho-hum!

In a cigar store down on the river front, where the fog almost obscured the entrance and where it bellowed in when the door was open, a solitary figure entered This man, his cap down on his forehead, his head lowered in his coat-collar, walked up to th counter.

"Gimme a package o' cigarettes," he said in muffled tones.

"Gotta telephone here?" he asked

"Sure—right over there," indicated the woman The man sorted out a nickel and shuffled toward the booth. The woman narrowly watched him. He closed the door tight and turned his head toward the door so that he could look as he called, his mouth close to the receiver.

"Howard two thousand," said the man, in one of those voices which cannot be heard beyond the receiver. Then, "Chief, Fitzpatrick." There was a click and the man continued, "Is this Chief I want to talk to the Chief . . . It's about his son" . . . There was a long pause. The man began to get nervous, started once to hang up the telephone, but held on. "Yes . . . Is this Chief Fitzpatrick talkin'?" his voice was hoarse. "Well, I'm speakin' for the guys what's got your son . . . Yes, yes . . . he's okay . . . now . . . When you lay off hell he brought back safe . . . Belmonte? . . . Never heard of him . . . You got the wrong guys this time . . . Lay off . . . Get me—"

He slammed up the receiver and walked out. The woman looked up quickly, but the man merely nodded, his chin still in his coat collar, and walked out She watched the door close, waited a moment and then went back to her cabbage, which she was preparing for supper. She had not been at her task more than ten minutes before two big, well-dressed men in fedora hats, entered.

"We're from headquarters," they informed her. "We traced a call from here—who has been usin' your 'phone?" one of them asked.

On her guard, as well with crooks as with cops, she hesitated.

"Why—nobody I don't think has been usin' the 'phone," she said slowly. She looked from one to the other. "I don' know—"

One of the officers walked around the counter and took her by the arm.

"What did he look like?"

"Thin—white-faced—looked like a dope—nervous—had on a cap—"

The two detectives looked at each other

Daisy Beaumont had been chucked in a rear room, devoid of furniture, filled with odds and ends, bits of plumbing, paint cans, tangled rope, in Guiseppe Belmonte's hunting lodge, 50 miles from the Big Burg. She knew it was Belmonte's hunting lodge, although they had brought her in blindfolded. But they had neglected to blindfold Daisy soon enough. She had been there before. And Daisy was observing.

The only light in the place was a small old-fashioned bulb, which hung near the ceiling. It threw out a yellow light, and the bulb was dust-covered. But when Daisy's eyes became accustomed to the light she began to take stock of the place. With the sense of comfort characteristic of beautiful women and cats, she picked out the softest spot in the place—a pile of rope—and sat down. They had at least left her her cigarettes, and she smoked one after the other as she waited. And she waited . . . that night they threw her in food and some coffee, without comment, and Daisy said nothing . . . then came a blanket . . . But the next day after breakfast the door opened and they pushed in a small figure. The door slammed shut.

"Who are you?" demanded the small fellow.

Daisy looked at him a moment.

"Who are you?"

"I'm Corporal Michael Fitzpatrick!" stoically exclaimed the little fellow. "Who are you?"

Propagandists---They Are So Sure of Themselves

By WINIFRED BLACK

"YES," said the woman, who was just leaving the great Congress of Religions, "yes, the world is all going to have just one religion some day. I may not be here when that day comes but it's coming—I'm sure of that."

"So'm I," said the woman walking beside her.

"And when the Universal Religion comes it's going to be mine"

"Don't laugh too hard—you may be a good deal like those two women yourself.

What is it about zeal whether it's religion or merely some sort of idealistic affair, that's going to turn the world upside down and make our old human nature all over again into something absolutely perfect? Why is it that any sort of zeal seems to insist on making everybody else "follow the man from Cooks." or words to that effect?

I met a woman at a party the other night.

But two days after I met her she came to see me, and she brought with her a man just out of the penitentiary, and she sat down and got the man to preach to me the doctrine that had sent him to prison.

I was tired—I was coming down with the flu, I had a lot of work to do.

I told the Nice Woman at these things, and she just nodded, and said, "why certainly, of course."

And then she turned to her friend, the man just out of prison and said.

"Tell her how you feel about the whole thing—the way this country is run the courts the pardon boards, the reform schools, the churches, the public schools and the Russians and their wonderful experiment."

And when the two people had quite said their say, and worn me out entirely, they went away quite cheerful

Now I wonder what my friend the Nice Woman would say if I went to her house tomorrow and took someone of some certain faith along and got him to preach a sermon on that faith, then and there.

You see besides being a Nice Woman, she is a Propagandist, and Propagandists are sometimes a little slow about other people's points of view—have you never noticed that?

Daily True Story

A Fortune Fake

"THAT WOULD PASS for the Twin Peaks payroll pouch anywhere. Labels correct and the package is the right size and weight. When the payroll pouch comes in on Number 4, I'll switch pouches. When Ranny Banks comes from the mine I'll hand him the fake one, and by the time they get wise I'll be clear away!"

Larry Martin, station agent at Enterprise, had spent many painstaking hours fashioning one robbery. Now he was to collect for his trouble. There was only one possibility of failure. For three months now a drummer had arrived on the train [illegible] one carrying the payroll followed Silas Scarff, at the general store, his samples of groceries and then either spent the evening at the pool hall or with Larry, staying in town overnight since there was no westbound train till morning. This time the drummer had brought a companion with him.

"Jim's taking my route," the drummer explained. "I'm showing him over the ground; then it's back to the city route for me. I wanted to drop this dump off the list altogether, Scarff don't believe in selling quality groceries."

"Maybe your prices are too high," Larry suggested. "He said he could get the same brand from his regular wholesalers cheaper."

"I heard they were cutting prices on us," the drummer replied. "Well, we might drop around tonight if Jim here can drag himself away from the pool hall."

PLATFORM DESERTED

Larry hoped Jim wouldn't be able to, and he was glad that the platform was deserted when No. 4 screeched to a stop. He receipted for the express pouch, and [illegible] began to cut its way through the fast gathering dusk. Hurrying back to the ticket office, Larry thought he saw something moving among the shadows at the end of the platform. He plowed his pace until the light from the express car door moved across the spot, but saw nothing to arouse suspicion.

At the ticket office he stopped. He opened the door and slammed it shut noisily while, from this angle in which he stood, he peered around the corner down the platform, and two shadows momentarily blotted out the vanishing lights of the train.

Two shadows? Two drummers, whose prices were so high that [illegible]—He? Come to think of it, they had asked plenty questions about things. That grocery business was a bluff. They were after the payroll, too! What a chance for him!

Silently he slipped into the office. He fumbled a [illegible] under the ticket counter, then rattling an express pouch, stepped to the safe. As he did so a pane crashed out of the window.

"Stick 'em up!" said a voice, and simultaneously a masked man entered by the door.

Larry whirled upon the intruder. There was a deafening report and a searing pain in his shoulder, and he slumped to the floor unconscious.

It was 10 minutes later when he recovered on the floor. Ranny [illegible]

POUCH WAS GONE

"Stickup, eh!" Ranny laughed "Just a flesh wound. Coming the way I did I heard the shot and stepped on the gas."

[illegible] toward the safe

"The pouch!" he cried. "Was there a pouch in front of the safe?"

"If there was, they got it!" said Ranny "Take it easy till your head clears."

"Help me up, Ranny! I must telephone a report!"

"It's done already. I got a guy said he was a dispatcher on that phone over there, and I spilled what I knew. He said he'd start things moving."

"Then I'll rest awhile," Larry said "I'm still kind of woozy. You haven't got a shot of something, have you Ranny?"

"No, but I guess I could rustle one over at the pool hall. You lie still till I get back!"

Larry chuckled inwardly His head was clear enough, and Ranny had fallen for that trick to get him out of the way. The crooks had taken the fake pouch. Yes! The real one was still under the counter, where [illegible] had put it. [illegible] began to cut its way through the fast gathering dusk. Hurrying back to the ticket office, Larry thought he saw something moving among the shadows at the end of the platform. He plowed his pace until the light from the express car door moved across the spot, but saw nothing to arouse suspicion

MOSES, "BULRUSHES" AND BEAR SELLING
By B. C. Forbes

Ernest L. Stockton, who, as president, is energetically building up Cumberland University, Tenn., remarked to me:

"I'm told that people in Wall Street are looking not only for a Moses but for 'bulrushes.' "

Bull-Rushes in Stocks

Instead of bull-rushes, the stock market lately has experienced little but bear-rushes. Official statistics show this.

What would you think if the doctor tending an anemic patient were to prescribe blood-letting, to be followed at some later time—provided the patient did not die meanwhile—by the return of the blood to the patient's body?

That is pretty much tantamount to short-selling during a market as weak as the present one. It is the sheerest bunk to argue that selling stocks short strengthens a market. Each and every sale, whether short or long, tends to depress a market. The market having been knocked down by bears, it does not necessarily follow that the whole damage will be undone when the re- buying is done.

Yet . . . indulged in a panic last month and have succeeded in dragging . . . down toward the lowest depths . . . in general is allowing . . . n" obviously is the prevailing . . . ratio.

Economy in Unemployment Relief

W. L. McKnight, president of the Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Company, employing 700 workers, says

"It will be far more economical and desirable for business to support its own unemployment relief directly than to pay taxes for maintenance of a government dole or similar system."

He has instituted a permanent unemployment benefit plan, supported by company earnings. The objective is to accumulate enough to pay $7 to $15 a week for ten to seventeen weeks a year for five years. In extreme emergencies those regularly employed may be called upon to contribute modestly.

Mr. McKnight believes the majority of American industries could profitably adopt similar plans

Rosy Side of the Picture

HOW BANKING CAME THROUGH 1931

1—With approximately 20,000 banks still serving their communities

2—With a bank for every 6173 people; whereas they were 9409 people for every bank in 1890.

With only 2 per cent of bank resources tied up in closing.

With recovery for depositors of approximately $1,326,000,000 as compared to about $37,650,000 recovery for creditors of bankrupt business houses

5—With more banks reopened than in 1930

6—With more new banks organized than in 1930

Meat Consumption Increased

Does it astonish you to learn that meat consumption last year exceeded 1929? Low prices helped. Reductions in wholesale prices from a year ago include Fresh pork loins, 50 per cent; hams, 20 per cent; bacon, 42 per cent; fresh beef, medium, 25 per cent; veal, 42 per cent; lamb, 31 per cent.

Verily, foundations have been laid for setting in of a period of reviving prosperity.

1929 Record to Be Broken

One reader, H. R. Simmonds, recalls that long ago an athlete hung up a record for the 100-yard dash, another a record for the broad jump, still another for the half-mile. They were marvelous records. But they were later eclipsed by better men. He adds

"Records are made to be bettered—and even 1929 records will prove no exception."

Covering of Fixed Charges by Rails a Possibility

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, Feb 9 (INS)—As among the freight volume this year will be at least equivalent to that of 1931, the railroads watch in 1931 were able to cover 75 to 80 per cent of their fixed charges should cover them entirely in 1932 with something to spare.

The result will be made possible by the modest advance in freight rates on one side and the one-cent a mile 2 cent passenger fare on the other. Unfortunately, the January decline in freight volume will wipe out many of the gains of last month's wage saving, and some of the prominent roads are applying the reconstruction corporation for funds to complete urgent improvements

There is little comfort for the holders of low-priced non-dividend common stocks of the poor earners among the transportation companies in the most favorable developments along these lines, but bondholders should take fresh courage from the fact that more funds will undoubtedly be available for service on outstanding bonds this year.

Of course, the well secured bonds of the profitably operated roads are sitting pretty, and always have been even during the darkest hours of the depression

From the practical investment standpoint, the bond which never defaults on its interest, and is able on maturity to make a satisfactory arrangement with the bulk of its holders finally emerging from the depression with no loss to a single investor, is as good as the best gilt-edge bond on the market.

The only disadvantage is the sharp reaction in prices when the financial skies are clear, which destroys the marketability of the bonds at anything like normal values

The skepties who doubt the ability of President Hoover and investment experts to pre-vent a list of sound bonds worthy of the consideration of the money hoarder would profitably turn their attention to the railroad list. It should consider

First—That as long as the roads are in operation under existing management, their bonds are entitled to rank as legal obligations on which interest payments and maturing instalments on the principal must be met.

Second—That current quotations on thousands of corporation bonds do not accurately reflect intrinsic values.

Third—That institutional buying of railroad bonds is certain to make its appearance as soon as there is satisfactory evidence of constructive activity in the financial structures of the roads.

Self-preservation in nature's first law in investments as in other fields of activity, and in thousands of cases the unloading of fairly stable bond holdings is provoked by no other factor than the example of other investors. When prices start to slip the average investor becomes alarmed and if the process continues he can easily work himself into a panicky condition. Then he runs at a time when genuine buying demand is smallest and receives the lowest prices on the move

Investment experts have not deviated from their belief that before the present depression period ends many investors will be picking up the best bargains in fixed life time in the railroad group.

STATE ST.

Hears:

That the outlook for stock prices has not changed materially. The drifting movement should continue down to or just under the early January lows. Until this has developed, and it may take place today, there is little incentive to abandon a comfortable position on the sidelines.

The Situation

Reliable observers, in a position to know what people in the high places are thinking, believe they can sense a subtle change for the better. Just what is responsible for this more confident air is hard to say. The important point is that it is visible to insiders. All this . . . a time when the financial . . . general is allowing . . . to gain fall into a false . . . This is not hard to understand with . . . prices going to new low . . . mune. However, it seems to many . . . competent analysis that February . . . may be a month of economic recuperation when January was a month of prescribing for business . . . and industrial ills

Those who follow the markets are, in the opinion of some interests, not looking to look for the developments of January as good news that is out. This does not appear to be the proper attitude. The formation of needed credit agencies and the obtaining of desired ordered measures is the first step. The benefits that will accrue will not be visible right away. But there is no reason to assume that the long-term effect is not decidedly bullish

Chrysler

Disappointing sales figures by a rising field in the motor industry brought out considerable selling of the group. In the case of Chrysler it meant that the two months' old bear tip finally reads good. As far as the internal condition of this company is concerned, it is quoted on the opinion of responsible observers. Production has held at a relatively high figure in the current of the industry. The reception on its new models was exceptionally good and it is thought that the new Plymouth, priced to meet all competition in and around the $500 class, will be just as well received

It is the judgment of conservative brokers that Chrysler is a scale purchase on recessions from the $11 level. Commitments should be made on this basis for a long-pull basis with the hope rather than the fear, that it will be obtainable as cheaply as $7

Boardroom Briefs

Reticence of Ford in announcing his new models is also a factor in poor sales reports of other makers . . . They do not desire to make any aggressive advertising campaign until they are aware of the sort of competition Ford will offer . . . Once this is known production figures should pick up along the line . . . Also steel makers will have a better idea as to what they may expect in the line of automotive requirements . . . As yet nothing has happened to alter the impression that the price averages are traveling along a rut that will prove to be the bottom. The publicized "T" of six months ago . . .

Bank shares are going way gradually and investors should keep a sharp eye on this division for bargains such as were seen in the middle of December.

New York City lately secured money on short-term bonds at six per cent, after satisfying banking interests that public impending expenditures, where within little more than a year it borrowed at 4½ per cent without questioning. The new money will go largely toward paying up or refinancing the older debts. Many of the leading banks are selling substantially below their prices as of date of the previous loan, despite the indication that their profits this year will be considerably above those for 1931.

Attention was referred to is that our tire makers, by turning out better tires, have built their own sales, as the percentage of replacement needs is necessarily materially reduced.

This is a unique departure, especially as it has been accompanied by reduced prices, though these were primarily made possible by the breaking up of the British rubber monopoly.

Hartford Electric Net Equals $3.12

Hartford Electric Light Co. for 1931 reported a net profit of $2,521,466 after taxes, depreciation, interest, etc, equal to $3.12 a share on 840,000 shares, as compared with $2,674,600, or $3.18 a share in 1930.

STEEL BUYING SEEN AS NEAR PROSPECT

By FRANK H. MELOON

Important buying of steel is seen in Stael st as a near prospect. The argument advanced is that the purchasing of steel for Ford requirements cannot be much longer delayed. One State st. partner says of this buying

"It will occur at any moment."

Its appearance would be widely construed as a bullish factor, probably on the lately receding motors as well as on the steel industry itself. Precedent early in buying by the railroads on a major scale are generally taken with more than a grain of doubt.

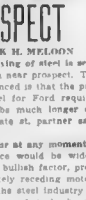
President Thomas B. Macaulay of John Life Assurance Co. contributes a cheerful note to the day's news when he states his belief that the future is bright. Such prosperity will most certainly not come, perhaps recovery will come perhaps expected. Sound confidence is concealed, however, expressed in Sun Life's retention of its equities in a leading American corporations. This company, by the way, is a leading stockholder in Boston Edison. It was at a gathering of agents in Swampscott that President Macaulay first set forth his company's policy of enduring faith in common stocks of progressive corporations as opposed to the "buy bonds only" poop of many others.



T. B. Macaulay

A news writer discovers that rises and lows are offering 6 per cent for tax loans and finding no one to lend. The proffered loans are called "the safest investment," but, as pointed out in this column, when such loans were being taken unquestioned, there is a difference between the financial standing of the different towns and cities. This was pointed out by me in an address before a representative body of bankers at the Boston Chamber of Commerce Building as far back as 1928.

The fact then noted is becoming more and more appreciated and generally perceived as time goes on. The most nearly safe investment is U. S. government bonds, but there are others which trail very close to Uncle Sam's obligations.

A nearby town, which has managed its finances in exemplary fashion over a number of years, recently paid money in the bank for a short-term loan. This was Weymouth. In most instances, however, the lenders are apt to want a voice in seeing that extravagance is omitted from town and city budgets. That is where the lenders today occupy a new position in their contact with politicians, though it has always been their position as regards loans to private persons or corporations.

Town or city can be well likened to a big corporation. The assets of neither town nor city are unlimited, as many with bankrupt credit in recent months have learned.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

FOREIGN buying of the oils has been reported from London, Amsterdam and Paris, but it has been on a scale down and accumulation has been slow. Some of these foreign orders are reported to have been cancelled when reports were circulated that Royal Dutch Shell would pay nothing in the united oil consumption steps up smartly before that time.

Short Position In Auburn Auto

The Auburn automobile pool is not so sanguine over the immediate prospects of the stock, but declare that "play" is not yet over. In other words, they expect to see Auburn reflect the elimination of a large part of the short interest. The bear account it is learned was only 20,000 shares on Friday, as contrasted with 70,000 shares a few weeks ago. The oxen have had ample opportunity to cover their shorts, and with no incentive to buy at the moment Auburn may abandon the speculative limelight for the time being.

Estates Hurt By Market Decline

One of the biggest banking houses in Wall Street which caters to large estates is in a peculiar problem on its hands. It seems one estate has a large block of New York Central in its portfolio and when the stock was selling in the eighties the bankers were tempted to liquidate, but changed their minds. New York Central is now selling more than 50 points lower and with no dividend status. Even the bankers have been fooled by the current bear market, which has exceeded the expectations of all except a few of the large bear operators.

Commodity Slump Unsettling Factor

During the past week, nine basic commodities, sugar, copper, zinc, rubber, cocoa, hides, corn, oats, and lard, a very impressive list, violated previous bottoms and established the lowest prices in history. Economists and the more far-sighted market students are inclined to regard the slump in commodities as an even more distrustful and unsettling factor in its markets outlook than the depressed level of business.

Many Adjustments Needed In Basic Lines

It is hardly likely, it is pointed out, that the trend of stock prices will break away from those of commodities, in the face of such commodities, according to major indices, is not cheering. In sugar, copper and rubber the statistical work is far from bullish. In copper, the last statistics showed that despite lower production, stocks still show a heavy increase, making an even heavier hi den for the immediate future. Obviously, drastic and reaching adjustments are yet to be made in basic lines before conditions can generally improve.

Tank Car Yield Better Than 13 Per Cent

Current estimates of approximately $5 a share to General American Tank Car for 1931 indicate earnings were a bit sharply as compared with the first three quarters, which showed respectively $1.48, $1.56 and $1.26, totaling $4.30 for the nine months. The stock receives $4 annually which around current levels yields better than 13 per cent. The company reported record earnings in 1930 and $8.03, which quite likely will be in a ready upturn in earnings, starting in 1932.

J. C. Penny Sales Holding

J. C. Penney common appeared to meet a fair demand whenever the general market showed any recovery. This has been due in part to evidence that some of the company have been holding well when compared with other concerns in similar lines. Estimates are that the earnings for last year were in the neighborhood of $3 a share on the common stock. This would compare with $2.81 in 1930. There was a decline of about 10 per cent in sales of J. C Penney in 1931, which was smaller than the average decrease of merchandise prices.

Hershey's Earnings Estimates Revised

Wall Street now is of the opinion that earning of Hershey Chocolate for 1931 will not come up to some of the more optimistic predictions made several months ago. Warm weather in the fall and winter months affected the sale of chocolate bars and kept dealers from disposing of much of the goldenrod bars as quickly as anticipated. Earnings to the company are believed to have been larger than expected and this affected the earnings for final three months of the year. It is said that the management will make every possible charge-off in the report for the year, so that 1932 will be started with a clean slate. .

Competition Hits Coal Roads

There has been evidence of persistent selling in some of the railroads which handle considerable coal traffic. This has been true in some of the recent sessions particularly in the cases of Chesapeake & Ohio and Norfolk & Western. Various factors have affected the coal shipments of these lines. Competition from abroad has been keen according to interests. In addition, the lessening industrial activity and the comparatively mild weather in certain sections served with coal by these carriers have curtailed shipments.

Western Union Target for Selling

Western Union has continued a target for selling by certain traders that have been active in that stock since it was selling more than double its current price. They have put out stocks on all the rallies and took advantage of the setbacks to cover some or all of their commitments. Most of the recoveries were attributed to short covering. At times when the demand has increased there was evidence of a limited supply in the stock.

Int'l Business Machine Report

Bear operators who apparently have been selling International Business Machine stock circulated a rumor that the company's business has shown a sharp falling-off especially in the "renting division." President Watson, of I. B. M., denied the rumor emphatically and come for the last quarter of 1931, he said, "were entirely satisfactory" and the company's foreign business also was good. As to the renting business, Mr. Watson said that in January, 1932, activities in this division were 5 per cent ahead of the same month of 1931.

New Machines to Be Placed on Market

International Business Machines' net income for 1931, it is estimated, will be "better than $11 a share." This indicates that last-quarter income exceeds $2.50 a share, since the first nine months of 1931 resulted in $8.40 a share net. New machines will be placed on the market by the company this year, according to Mr. Watson.

Corn Products Stock Holdings

According to a broker closely identified with Corn Products, "if all the company's railroad stock holdings were distributed, it wouldn't amount to $5 a share on Corn Products' stock."

U. S. Crude Oil Exports Increasing

United States shipped more crude oil from the country in 1931 than in any year since 1920, exceeding 1928, with the bulk of last year's supply going to England and Japan, according to the Commerce Department's Minerals Division.

While exports ran off all last year increased 8 per cent in volume from those of the preceding year, the value declined 43 per cent, it is stated. Canada took 75 per cent of last year's shipments and Japan took 8 per cent, Japan having been steadily increasing her purchases in this country.

Roan Antelope's Output Announced

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—The Roan Antelope Copper Mill treated 50,7000 tons of ore in January, averaging 3.77 per cent copper, according to cable advices from Rhodesia, South Africa, to C. D. Barney & Co. Smelter production was 2,000 tons of blister copper, assaying 98.82 per cent. The December mill total was 46,000 tons, 3.84 per cent ore and shipments for that month were 4164 tons of blister copper, assaying 99.73 per cent.

General Laundry Holders to Meet

A meeting of debenture holders of General Laundry Machinery Corp., and claimants against the organization was adjourned until Feb. 26 at 2 p. m. due to lack of a quorum. The meeting was called to approve a plan whereby the stocks of Columbia-Troy Corp., a liquidating company, will be issued to holders of claims against and debentures of the company pro-rata.

TREND IS LOWER IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Trend was lower in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange with changes limited largely to fractions. General Electric sagged fractionally to a new 1931-32 low New England Telephone eased a point and American Telephone showed a minor fraction decline.

Edison Electric sold unchanged from its previous closing level Maine Central lowered 2 points to 15 and Boston & Albany dropped a point to 124

Brown & Co. preferred was strong, moving over a point to 81½. United Fruit added nearly a point at 20¾. Gillette and Kreuger & Toll were at slightly lower levels.

In January Island Creek Coal Co. mined 288,245 tons of coal, compared with 336,494 tons in December and with 375,074 tons in January, 1931.

"Robot Banker" Is Being Made in Laboratory

New York, Feb., 6—Two-score years ago our fathers laughed at suggestions that, in time men would speed over the waters at more than 100 miles per hour; that men would span the Atlantic in hour and a half instead of days or hours; that the horse would practically become extinct, and be replaced by "horseless carriages, buggies," etc. However, all these things have come to pass and are now more or less common in our modern existence, says the American Banker.

In the bank of 40 years ago, "modern" equipment consisted of quill pens, ink, ledgers, wooden counters, tellers' cages and safe deposit doors, the latter placed almost anywhere in the banking rooms, for there were no vaults with the fuss in those days, even in the East.

Today, all this has changed. We are in a mechanical age. Robots now write out checks, cancel checks. Robots keep our books, count our cash, type, open and seal our letters, address envelopes, and among other things, perform our mathematical problems. The cuspidors are gone.

Where formerly a great many persons were required to perform a certain operation in connection with volume then and now, the robots have cut this personnel in half, if not more. For example, a modern high speed envelope opener will do the work of six boys in opening the morning mail.

And yet, it might be said that this advance in invention is but in its infancy. Many persons have been considered over-presumptuous by forecasting that all these modern bank appliances will in time become obsolete.

Witness the astonishing changes in the manufacture of bank equipment during only the past five years.

Over-presumptuous?

These same persons are considered over-presumptuous in forecasting that in time to come the robots will cause further and greater destruction of banking personnel. Even at this moment at the Newark plant of the Western Electric Company Co. there is being perfected a robot which will read and sort millions of printed cards or checks, operated through a single "electric eye" and which can be manipulated by one person. A machine is in existence which will make change from a vault deposited by the teller a touch of the keys

From England comes news that one of the "Big Five" banks is experimenting with a new "punch-sorter-print" machine, which it is claimed can be used for practically every type of bank transaction.

The equipment consists of three kinds of machines punchers, sorters and tabulators. The information required is punched on to a card by the punchers and the remaining machines sort out the details required and tabulate and print the results

Some years hence we may see every single item thrown into a general hopper, posted, cancelled, certified and what not. A one-man bank.

Over-presumptuous?

SPECTATOR

Says:

Leaving out of consideration, for the moment, the fact that the accepted market averages are hovering fractionally above their former lows for the decline, there is a growing belief on the part of well-posted observers that the stock list is gradually working into a position to record a worth-while recovery from around these levels.

Upturn Due

The gloom enshrouding speculative circles is now so thick that it is somewhat difficult to point out to traders that the market has already lost ground in nine of the past 11 sessions, and that, on technical ground alone an intermediate upturn is about due

Some hint of a turn was discernible in Monday's session when, despite an outward appearance of weakness, such leading issues as American Telephone and U. S. Steel were able to close higher on the day.

Absurd Theory

Let us assume for the purpose of argument that the old bear market lows established on January 5th are to be broken. Then what? The prevailing impression in the minds of many traders seems to be that penetration of the former bottoms will result in some terrific extermination. But on a theory is absurd and hardly worthy of attention under present deflated market conditions

For example, what difference in the world has it made to holders of such issues as Case Threshing, General Electric and Radio to maintain only a few of the traders which knew set new bottoms, that the standard stock averages have met support above their previous lows? As far as they or individually are concerned, the accepted market indexes might have tumbled a dozen points and left their own stocks no worse off than at present.

Caution Necessary

It is becoming increasingly apparent, from day to day, that many issues have definitely passed the worst for the bear market. Until the weeding out process has been completed, however, extreme caution is necessary in making commitments.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Whitney & Fiswell—No one can say whether the market is over still or whether the present level at around the lows of the bear market is actually the bottom. While some stocks may sell considerably lower, due to uncertainty as to earnings and dividend actions, there are many others whose outlook is comparatively favorable. Some of these "go down hard. Indications are they are being well bought. Stocks that act best now should rally quickest on any technical rally, or when change in sentiment occurs.

Shields & Co.—The character of the market is about as bearish as ever experienced as that any unexpected good news could affect stocks favorably is very unlikely. The outlook is such, however, that any rally should be regarded as but temporary interruptions of the main price trend.

Hornblower & Weeks—A normal consequence of the almost uninterrupted decline since the middle of January would suggest the development shortly of a rally of technical proportions.

Fishery Products Total Is Lower

Fishery products landed in December at Boston, Gloucester and Portland, Me., totaled 14,805,-066 pounds valued at $535,977, a decrease of 14 per cent in quantity and 32 per cent in value from the volume of December 1930, according to figures made public today by Comr. Henry O'Malley of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries. In December, 1931, 234 vessels made 768 trips. In December, 1930, 280 vessels made 968 trips.

Haddock was the leading item and accounted for 55 per cent of the total catch delivered at the three cities. Cod was second with 19 per cent and herring followed with 7 per cent of the total.

Dividends

General Asphalt Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable Mar. 15 to stock of record Mar. 1. In the two preceding quarters the company paid 50 cents.

Norfolk & Western Railroad Company today declared usual quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share on the common stock. It is pay able March 10 to stockholders of record February 20

The Rulova Watch Co omitted the quarterly dividend of 87½ cents on the preferred stock due for payment on March 1, it was announced today.

PRICES MIXED IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Feb. 9—Prices of important shares showed mixed trends after a lower opening in New York Stock Exchange dealings today. Initial recessions were largely fractional, and support was evident later in portions of the list.

U. S. Steel sold mostly over a merely fractional range. The old stable Auburn Auto issue was soon marked up a couple of points.

RAILROADS SUPPORTED

Buying support appeared for New York Central and New Haven, both of which changed hands at moderate advances. Liggett & Myers preferred stepped up a couple of points.

General Electric set a new low when it dipped a point fractions. Western Union was up a point. Standard Oil of New Jersey was down a point, along with a few National Investors, Atchison sold fractionally.

Detailed plans of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for financing various categories of industry and finance were furnished in the investment community today. These were interpreted as favorable to prospective borrowers, particularly the provision whereby the corporation may make loans for long maturities for three-year duration.

Nation-wide campaigns for creating 15,000 new jobs and to stop hoarding were closely watched, although the financial community reasoned it was still too early to judge of their success.

Weekly federal reserve statement showed a decrease of $20,000,000 in loans and investments and an increase of $28,000,000 in bank borrowings.

A. I. C. PLAN BLOCKED

Wall St. hears plan of American International Corp. to acquire control of Reliance International Corp. through exchange of stock has not materialized because of failure of stockholders of latter company in Canada to deposit required amount of stock. At adjourned meeting of American International, stockholders today it will probably be announced that offer, which expired Monday night, will not be renewed or extended. Failure of this plan is attributed in part to activities of Canadian banks.

The financial district heard today that business men realty interests and building groups are preparing the greatest drive ever for a rapid transit fare increase in New York. The city will be well under way within a few months. Relief is predicated upon city's present financial condition, as a result of all public works projects have been curtailed and every effort is being exerted to find new sources of revenue.

Journal of Commerce says efforts are being made now by both national and state bank authorities to effect orderly liquidation of assets of suspended banks, so as to raise a minimum of disturbance to security markets and business.

Instead of permitting sales to be made locally by federal examiners as in haphazard fashion, this agency will now dispose of them through regular investment bank channels. Said that some $50,000,000 of bonds are now being disposed of in this way, often in large blocks to dealers who plan to redistribute them to individual investors.

CURB MARKET HAS DECLINES

New York, Feb. 9—Declining tendencies were again evidenced in curb dealings today, with continued liquidation throughout the run of active issues, resulting in a further sprinkling of price declines all along the line.

Many of the specialty issues showed wider recessions, notably Glen Alden Coal, which dropped off 1¾ points to a record low, A. O. Smith which was down 1¼ points and Aluminum, which was off ⅛ point.

Goldman Sachs went into new low territory for the year, with a further setback of ⅛. Other Industrials were somewhat steadier, with only a few changes.

Standard Oil of Kentucky was under the pressure of selling, finishing a loss of 1 point. Standard of Montana was slightly lower.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Dere stent coughs and colds lead to set...ousness. Y...ou can stop now with Creomulsion a...gainst dangerous c... that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two distinct actions; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creomulsion is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agents for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat trouble. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Now two sizes 60c, $1.25. (Ads.)

PLAN WELCOME HOME FOR MISTER FRISBY

Miss Minnie McGinnis (above) has proposed a Monster Demonstration to mark the return of Congressman Frisby from Manchuria. Miss McGinnis, who terms herself as one of the Congressman's former dream girls, has asked the courts to issue an injunction to prevent Mrs. Frisby from asking an injunction to balk Miss McGinnis from obtaining an injunction against the plan. It is the proposal of Miss McGinnis to have all Frisby admirers wear Grecian bed sheets, and strike the pose illustrated above. Mr. Frisby, after being escorted from the boat, will be stuffed with ice cream and cake, and then mounted on a huge truck for posterity.

WHY CECIL IS LIKE MAN WHO BIT DOG

Just back of us, one page on the starboard bow—Yo Ho and a bottle of sarsaparilla!—Burris Jenkins interviews old Doc Clauss—no relation to Santa Claus—the sawbones who takes care of the Rangers, who are with us tonight, and breaks out in a rash about the hockey hospital corps. You see your old pal and enemy, "Ching" Johnson, the most busted up and sawed up player in the league, getting his usual stitches. If "Ching" didn't say "Howdy, Doc, saw away," after every game he would think the conk caveing and shin cracking sport had degenerated into ping-pong. But Burris has left the strangest exhibit in hockey out of his drawing. They say that if a dog bites a man it isn't news, but if a man bites a dog, it is. Most of the hockey players have more wounds than a Chicagoan. It isn't news to tell about a cracked-up and banged-up hockey player. But it is news to tell of one who isn't. The Rangers have such a curiosity right in their ranks, too. It's Cecil Dillon. Cecil, friend fans, never has had a single stitch taken in his whole six feet of vibrant anatomy. The face the blondes in the fifth row rave over is unblemished by the mark of a single solitary scar. He is such a curiosity in Chicago they have to call out the police whenever he strolls on the Boule Mich. He's just as much as a curiosity in the dressing rooms all around the circuit. The players drop in and say, "Lemme get a peek at the only hockey player in the world without a few cute little cuts on him." Cecil says he doesn't take baths in brine to harden his cute little cuticle and doesn't seem to know why he has escaped the usual hockey wounds. "Guess I have an unconscious way of protecting myself against the hard checks and the flying shillelahs," says Cecil, and lets it go at that. Reckon we'll have to, too

"Come all ye gallant Shanty Lads and listen while I sing,
The ice is black and rotten, an' the rollaways are piled high,
So hoost upon your peavy sticks, while I do tell you why-y—
Old Woods Chantey.

Don't get excited at our yodelling "When the Drive Comes Down." We get that way some times, especially after a visit to the Sportman's Show in the Mechanics Building, where a couple of lumberjacks did a bit of birling. Birlers—Shucks! You should have seen Long Bill Garrett and Polcon Lecroix ride those logs up on the Shawanaga in the good old days. There was no white-water man in the North Country like Long Bill. 'Most as tall as Carnera, built like Ernie Schaaf, strong as a grizzly and as light on his feet as a panther. Handled a peavystick or a canthook with the skill of a fencing master with a foil. Long Bill was a great woods fighter, a scrapper of the knock 'em down, bite off their ear and kick 'em in the slats variety. What a ring fighter he would have made, if some good manager and plucked him out of the tall timber when he was yet young enough!

Yes, Gene Venzke may yet make us forget all about Paavo Nurmi, as we said after seeing him breeze the Casey Mile under double wraps in 4.15 1-5. A week later the big 6-foot 170-pound New York A. C. greyhound stepped eight furlongs in 4.11 1-5, wrecking the former world's indoor figures of 4.12, jointly held by Nurmi and Joie Ray. Sooner or later the former die casting apprentice, who at 23 is a senior in Pottstown high school and wants to go to Yale, may crack Ladoumegue's world outdoor mark of 4.09 1-5. If Venzke and Lermond should meet again in the Hunter Mile here at the B. A. A. meet on Saturday, you will see a great race, but the Arena track is too small and sharp turned for record-wrecking time. According to latest reports Venzke will not go to the post in the local meet.

JOHN P. JONES

Next to John Paul Jones, of Cornell, Venzke is the greatest miler we ever saw. Trained and campaigned rightly, Jones would have turned a mile under 4.09. But he ran in too few races, had no judgment of pace and lacked racing judgment. Jones did all his running in the last quarter. If he ever had stepped a mile right from the gun he would have put the mile record where it would have stood for years. We have seen Billy George, Tommy Connell, George Tincler, Norman Taber, Arnold Jackson, Abel Kiviat, Mel Sheppard, Ray, Nurmi, all the great milers since the '90's. But we never saw as great a natural miler as John Paul Jones.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

A LONE STAR TRIO

Down in the Lone Star State the Texans think a lot of Art Shires. Here you see the Peck's Bad Boy—but not too bad—of Baseball, surrounded by two dignitaries of the Lone Star State, U. S. Senators SHEPPARD, left, and CONNOLLEY, right. Art the Great is telling 'em they should be tickled to death to be able to get in the same picture with him.

Bakeshop Job Kept Art in Spending Dough

This is the third of a series of highlights in the career of Arthur the Great Shires, colorful new first baseman of the Braves, written by Joe Cashman, baseball expert of the Boston Evening American. Other installments will follow daily. Watch for them!

By JOE CASHMAN

Charles Arthur Shires, to give the Braves' new first sacker his baptismal name, developed his penchant for the limelight quite young in life.

He was ever planning ways and means to impress his greatness on the good citizens of Italy and to get himself talked about.

When he was in high school, Hollywood was introducing the "Sheik" as God's greatest gift to the American woman. So nothing would do but that our hero become the answer to the prayer of the town's fairest maidens.

He became the steady escort of the village belle and made sure that all his acquaintances learned of his conquest by frequently parading her past the favorite gathering places of the younger set.

This courtship led to his first job.

Art's Young Lady Friend Inspired Him to Seek Job

Like all young ladies before and since, Art's girl occasionally hinted that a frappe or sundae would add to the pleasure of walking and sometimes grew so bold as to suggest that she might enjoy seeing the current screen attraction at the local opera house.

Now, to satisfy these whims required money, something the young man had little of at the moment. Father Shires was able to provide his large family with all the necessities and not a few of the luxuries of life, but he couldn't afford to keep his children's pockets lined with gold, or even coppers.

So Art had to get a job. And he did, proving that the depression wasn't always with us. He hired out as a delivery boy in the town bakeshop, where he could be always in the dough.

The youngster felt that now that he was working, he had the right to remain out as late in the evening as he wished. And that was quite late. After he saw the girl friend home, he'd wish to go down to the pool room, depot, ice cream emporium, drug store or wherever the gay young blades happened to be congregated to explain to them his remarkable power over women.

His father forbade it.

Art tried disobeying a few times, but on each occasion his father showed up even before he could begin the recital, grabbed him by the ear and marched him home. So the gang never learned the secret of his spell over the fair sex. It did learn, however, of the father's spell over the youth, a spell that was never known to fail.

It might be imagined that Shires was unpopular with his schoolmates because of his efforts to hold the center of the stage and his willingness to broadcast his accomplishments, but such was not the case. On the contrary, he was very popular. He was likable, generous, loyal, full of fun, courageous and in the majority of cases he made good his boast. So he gained the love and respect of most of his pals and retains them to this day.

He also had a great sense of humor which, naturally, added to his popularity. Those of the old gang that remain in Italy still talk and laugh about some of the pranks he originated. Of these, a word on the morrow.

Hockey Giggles

By BILL GRIMES

Just before the close of the last season that Odie Cleghorn managed the Pittsburgh Pirates, Benny Leonard, who, for some unexplained reason, had been appointed president of that club, announced that he had purchased a great Western player by the name of McGuire.

As he was trying to build for the future, Manager Cleghorn looked the newcomer over very carefully during practice but was not favorably impressed as McGuire appeared to lack "pep." During the next regular game, Odie looked around the Pirates bench for a replacement and lo and behold there was Leonard's brave bucko sound asleep.

After some dickering, Odie Cleghorn arranged a straight sale for McGuire with the Cleveland Club of the International League.

The next season Odie Cleghorn, having severed his connections with the Pirates, started officiating in the N. H. L. On his first trip West, Odie met the manager of the Cleveland Club to whom he had sold McGuire.

"How's McGuire going," inquired Odie.

"Fine, he's going home, today," was the retort. Even the icy breeze off Lake Erie had not been able to cure McGuire. He was THE Sleeping Beauty of hockey history.

130 Men Out for Crews at Harvard

Prospects looked bright today for the 50th season of Harvard's crew racing fortunes. More than 130 aspiring oarsmen reported to the Newell boathouse tank for the opening day of the training season.

The first day was only a preliminary gesture, each man going through about 10 minutes' paddle work at the oars of the stationary "boats" in the tank.

Only two of last year's undefeated varsity eight are lost to Head Coach Charley Whiteside this year, Capt. John W. Hallewell, No. 2, and Albert N. Webster, No. 4.

From Boxer to Bank President---By Jim McCarron

It is quite a jump from the role of amateur boxer to bank president, but Jimmy McCarron of Somerville feels he can make it. Jimmy is juggling millions as a local bank official, he passes away his spare time knocking out opponents who cross his path in the 135-pound division of amateur boxing shows.

The Somerville youngster has entered the University Club tournament which takes place at the Garden on Friday night. He will forget all about balance sheets and the moratorium, while he tries to belt some husky rivals out of the picture.

VENZKE WON'T FLASH HERE

Gene Venzke, the season's premier miler, who established a new indoor world mark for one mile, will not enter the hunter mile at the Boston Athletic Association games at Boston Arena next Saturday, it appeared today.

Word from New York was that the youth, who in the Millrose A. A. games last Saturday clipped four-fifths of a second off the mark jointly held by Paavo Nurmi and Joie Ray, to establish a record of 4:11 1-5, will rest, temporarily at least, on his New York laurels.

While Venzke's decision robs the hunter mile of some of its glamor, the 1000-yard run was enhanced by the entry of George Bullwinkle of the Illinois A. C. Russell Chapman, ex-Bates star, decided also to enter the event instead of the mile.

The New York A. C. has entered a one-mile relay quartet and Otto Rossnall, ex-Princeton 'Varsity runner, will represent the club in the special 600-yard event.

Court Games Wanted

The L. D. Brandeis basketball team of the West End House wants games with teams averaging 115-126 pounds on home and home basis. Call Lafayette, 9425 and ask for Georg Brenner.

The Daily Dozen

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Many fans, after reading the account of the Bruin Cubs-Providence game at the Garden on Saturday night, thought that it must have been a game of down East hockey, a sport wherein manslaughter calls for only a two-minute penalty.

The two minutes are used to remove the body.

The game of down East hockey was played at the Arena. But the Garden fans must have forgotten where they were.

Venzke would be the only suburbanite who could ever do the distance in that time.

There is a lot of talk about American track and field stars and what they promise to do in the Olympics. But can they fight?

Judging by the squabbles among the Olympic winter sports competitors, track and field sports will be just an accident to a general brawl.

There must be a lot of Americans racing off Havana. A yacht called Moonshine won the Bacardi Cup.

Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker of the Madison Square Garden, must have a grudge against Mickey Walker. He's trying to sign him up for a bout with Schaaf.

YANKEE BOBSLEDDERS SMASH WORLD RECORD

SWISS FIRST CLIP OLD MARK

Olympic Bob Sled Course, Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP)—J. Hubert Stevens of Lake Placid, driver of the first American team in the two-man bob sled races of the winter Olympics, set a new record for the Mt. Van Hoevenberg bob sled run today when he covered the course in 2:08.27.

Stevens bettered the mark of 2:08.88 made earlier in the day by Reto Capadrutt, driver of the Switzerland second team, who broke Stevens' previous record of 2:09 made last year.

Olympic Bob Sled Course, Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP)—Reto Capadrutt, youngest of the Olympic bobsled contestants, broke the world record for the Mt. Van Hoevenberg Olympic bob sled run today when he took his rope-driven, white Swiss sled down the hazardous course in 2:05:58 in the first heat.

The previous record was 2:08 held by J. Hubert Stevens of Lake Placid, whose time for his first run today was 2:13.10.

Visibility was good and there was little or no wind on Mt. Hoevenberg as the teams braced themselves for the first of the two competitive runs down the treacherous descent.

Under Olympic rules, the time made for each of the two runs is added, an dthe team with the lowest total is the winner for the day.

On the same basis the team with the lowest score for four runs in the heat will win the Olympic bobsled championship.

Frost that gripped the sled runners on the curves and held the bobsleds somewhat in check made the course slower than usual for the first runs.

Swiss No. 1 Team Refuses to Try Dangerous Course

Hans Killias took his German sled down the run in 2:15.27 on his first heat. After hearing the time he said the course was becoming slower with each speeding sled broke through the icy crust on the slide.

Capadrutt, youngest driver ever to run on an Olympic course, not yet 20 years old, hit Eyrise, the first of the hazardous curves, in 29 2-5 seconds, and slid over the vertical wall of ice at White-Face in the second curve, in 52½ seconds. At the treacherous "shady corner" his time was 1:31 1-5, and he took "zig-zag" in 1:33 1-5 to cross the finish line in 2:05 4-5.

Swiss Youngster Skillful Pilot

The Swiss team captain was favored by many from the beginning because of his European performances and his skill in handling a rope-driven sled, particularly adapted to the snowy course which the teams of eight nations faced today.

The second German team, of which Michael Huth is driver, held the second best officials time in the first heat, 2:11.53, slightly better than that of Johann Strub of Lake Placid, North American champion, whose record for the course was broken by young Capadrutt.

The summaries:

German team No. 1—Hans Killias, driver. First heat, 2:15.27; second heat, 2:11.08. Total time for two heats, 4:26.35.

French team, Louis Blanan, driver. First heat, 2:20.01; second heat, 2:10.37. Total time, 4:30.17.

Slade Signs With Brooklyn Dodgers

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—Receipt of the signed contract of Gordon Slade, shortstop, was announced today by the Brooklyn club of the National Baseball League.

Lopez Wins Salary Talk With Robins

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 9 (INS)—Al Lopez, brilliant young catcher, declared today he had won his salary argument with officials of the Brooklyn National League Club. The Cuban said he had signed a 1932 contract for $10,000, the same amount received last season.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Instead of waiting for a recurrence of those disgraceful episodes that marred the Cubs-Reds game at the Garden, Pres. James E. Dooley, of the Canadian American League should act immediately. A continuance of such actions will give the Can-Am League a black eye in the minds of the unbiased hockey fans.

Under ordinary circumstances and conditions, the referees have been justified in calling off the game, but under the present circumstances, with the fans in the mood they were, it was a mistake to call off the game. Providence fans are just about on a par with the local "fans."

Dutch Keeling has been popping so many important goals for the New York Rangers that he is now known as the "Minute Man."

It is doubtful if Wilbur Powers and Art Nisson will be in condition to play for Dartmouth against Harvard at the Garden next Saturday night. Powers was ordered to the Dick Hall House after the Yale game, suffering from bronchitis, while Nisson, another sophomore star, came up with a "charlie horse."

Jim McHugh is a better goalie than he has shown himself to be since he joined the Dartmouth varsity. While at Melrose high, McHugh was rated with the best in New England schoolboy circles but he apparently has not recovered from the 13 goals Yale beat him for in the opening game of the season.

Regardless of opinions to the contrary, Bill Stewart and Carl Jacobs officiated a good game although their minds must have been distressed by the riding they received from the officials of both teams and the crowd, many of whom got their views from the actions of those in charge.

One of the duties of a league president should be to be present at all games in which the rivalry is as keen as that existing between the Cubs and the Reds. The reports of "runners" may be authentic, but first-hand information makes it possible for the president to act without fear of having received some misinformation, which might prove embarrassing.

And, by the same token, the president who attempts to feel his way, to discover whose foot he is going to trample on, instead of taking a fearless stand, is far more of a liability than an asset to his league and also the game.

The referees who are appointed to handle the Cubs-Reds game tomorrow night in Providence are in for a hectic evening. As far as sportsmanship is concerned, the Providence fans are just about on a par with the local "fans."

Dutch Keeling has been popping so many important goals for the New York Rangers that he is now known as the "Minute Man."

It is doubtful if Wilbur Powers and Art Nisson will be in condition to play for Dartmouth against Harvard at the Garden next Saturday night. Powers was ordered to the Dick Hall House after the Yale game, suffering from bronchitis, while Nisson, another sophomore star, came up with a "charlie horse."

Jim McHugh is a better goalie than he has shown himself to be since he joined the Dartmouth varsity. While at Melrose high, McHugh was rated with the best in New England schoolboy circles but he apparently has not recovered from the 13 goals Yale beat him for in the opening game of the season.

One-Eyed Player Wins 10th World Cue Title

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP)—Augie Kieckhefer of Chicago, a southpaw shooter by necessity, was king of the three-cushion billiard world for the tenth time today.

The diminutive Chicagoan, who was forced to change into a southpaw years ago when he lost the sight of his left eye, ascended the throne with a convincing display of mastery last night, when he routed his old rival, Otto Reiseli, of Philadelphia, 50 to 27 in 40 innings.

Stroking along with his best artistry and judging the pace of his shots with uncanny accuracy Kieckhefer gave Reiselt a fine billiard lesson. He took the lead, staved off a threat in the early innings with fine defensive play and then dashed off to a long lead that simply shattered his rival's technique and billiard morale.

His victory sent him into a tie as champion of champions of the three-cushion domain with Johnny Layton, the Sedalia (Mo.) red head, whose magic cue also has captured the crown 10 times. But the victory won by Kieckhefer was probably the most valuable of them all, as it gave him an annual salary of $6000, $1200 in cash, 16 per cent of the net game receipts from the long tournament and a diamond emblem, emblematic of the title, worth another $1000.

A good attraction, Kieckhefer was expected to add at least $10,000 more during the year with the proceeds of exhibitions.

Two Teams Tie in Chicago Bike Race

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP)—William (Torchy) Peden of Vancouver, B. C., and Jules Audy of Montreal, Canada, were tied for first place this morning with Charley Ritter of Newark, N. J., and Jimmy Walthour of New York city in Chicago's 27th international six-day bicycle race.

One hundred sixteen laps were gained last night and so far today for a total of 217. The leaders had ridden 621 miles nine laps.

Milligan Sold

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (INS)—Johnny Milligan, southpaw pitcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, has been sold outright to the Toronto club.

New York, Feb. 9 (INS)—Roy Worters, ailing goalie, will be in the lineup of the New York Hockey Americans when they play the Chicago Black Hawks here tonight.

points in arrears of the Detroit Falcons.

With the return of Tiny Thompson, the Bruins should offer a more formidable defense. Thompson has completely recovered from his injured side and if he is given proper protection by his defense men until he gets the feel of things, he will be the old Tiny Thompson who was chiefly responsible for the success of the Rosemont team during the past three seasons.

Manager Art Ross will start Conroy Weiland at center with Dit Clapper and Marty Barry on the wings and will have Eddie Shore and Lionel Hitchman on the defense.

Art Chapman will team with Harry Oliver and Dede Klein, while Frank Jerwa will work with Perk Galbraith and Eddie Burke, with Eddie Jeremiah as a spare forward. George Owen and Jack Pratt will do the relief work for Shore and Hitchman.

John Ross Roach will be in the goals for the Rangers, protected by Ching Johnson and Earl Seibert, with the Cook brothers and Frank Boucher as the starting forward line.

As usual, the Cooks and Boucher are among the high scorers, although the latter is a few notches below par but Manager Lester Patrick's replacements have played an important role in the Rangers' campaign this season. Cecil Dillon has been a valuable asset to the Patricians, as had Butch Keeling and Art Somers, while Dutch Gainor has shown flashes of his old time form.

Murray Murdock, Art Somers and Cecil Dillon compose the second Ranger line, with Vic Desjardines, Dutch Gainor and Butch Keeling as the third unit and Hib Milks and Dutch Heller in reserve.

Roamers Ready for Lowell Cyclists

Boston Roamers motorcycle polo team is all ready to swing into action tomorrow night at the Arena against Lowell.

The starting lineup tomorrow night probably will be Erle Armstrong, Oke Hedmun, Jesse James and Skip Sherlock in goal, with Vic Bishop, Bill Irwin, Red McCue, Johnny Mitchell and Bill Frykberger in reserve.

Sonny, Judson in Brockton Mat Go

Gus Sonnenberg, who has dragged in over one million dollars at the box office during the past three years, will clash with Frank Judson, former Harvard mat coach, at Brockton tonight. Gus says he will show a brand of tackling Judson never saw at dear old Harvard.

Husky Courtmen Face Pratt Friday

Northeastern basketball team travels to Brooklyn, N. Y., Friday to play Pratt Institute, with the best record yet made by a Husky varsity five. The victory over Tufts Saturday gave the Huskies their eighth win in 11 starts.

JAFFEE GETS OLYMPICS REVENGE

By IRVING JAFFEE

Olympic Champion at 5000 and 10,000 Meters

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 9 (US)—Four long years of waiting had a happy ending for me.

My winning the 10,000-meter championship in the winter Olympic games was really a revenge. The only kind of revenge I wanted —for having the title taken away from me in St. Moritz, Switzerland, at the 1928 games.

I have spent the years since then looking forward to the day when I could prove that I was not a fluke champion. At St. Moritz I had the fastest time for the 10,000-meter and was entitled to the championship, under European rules, but it was decided to call the event no race.

Well, I'm happy now — happy to be alongside Jack Shea as a double champion, because I consider him the greatest sprint skater the world has had.

SMITH LEADING WITH 36 POINTS

Montreal, Que., Feb. 9 (AP)—Players in the Canadian section of the National Hockey League have taken over five of the first six places in the race for individual scoring honors, with Reginald J. (Hooley) Smith of the Montreal Maroons still the pace-setter.

Smith has scored nine goals and made 27 assists for a point total of 36, according to averages compiled by the league for games up to and including Dec. 26 of last month. Second place at 34 points belongs to Harvey Jackson of Toronto with Charlie Conacher, another Toronto ace, third with 32.

Conacher has scored the most goals, 27, while Smith and Joe Primeau of Toronto have the most assists, also 27.

Earl Seibert of the New York Rangers has forged into the lead among penalized players with 71 minutes served. Ching Johnson of the Rangers and Red Horner of Toronto are only a minute behind. Figures for leading scorers follow:

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

Ed George, former heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, has sent us a fiery telegram. Unlike some fighters we could mention, George didn't send the wire collect. Here it is:

"Just read where Henri DeGlane has got his trunks packed and ready to sail for France because Paul Bowser demands that he meet Jim Browning. Understand Browning is weeping because he isn't going to get a shot at the Frenchman.

"You may tell Browning that if he is really anxious to get his hair mussed up that I shall be ready to tackle him after I get through with Bibber McCoy at the Arena on Thursday night. As champion, I always meet all comers, and I don't intend to start picking my opponents now."

This should solve Bowser's problem. If George is able to lick McCoy, he would make a perfect opponent for the rugged Browning.

McCoy could also be sent to bat with Browning if he comes through with a victory. Bibber looked good licking Al Morelli, and the gang over in Mayor Russell's town think he is unbeatable. George will prove whether they're right, or just talking through their bonnets.

Browning will have to get a body guard to protect him from all the birds who wish to put him on the spot, in a wrestling way. There is Farmer George McLeod who intends to shoot for a tussle with the top body scissors king. He clips his head scissors around Pat McKay's ears at the Arena show.

Adolph Heuser to Hop Into Cleveland

Adolph Heuser, German light heavyweight sensation, believes that the quickest way to become world's champion is by letting his punches fly. He was to leave for Cleveland late today for a tenround frolic with George Manley of Denver, on Thursday night. Manley is rated No. 2, right up next to Maxie Rosenbloom, in the light heavyweight list. If Heuser can get by Manley he can pipe:

"Hey there, Maxie, come on and fight me for your title."

Garibaldi Says He Is in Need of a Belt

Did Gino Garibaldi get excited when Strangler Lewis tipped the world he owns a belt which was presented to him by the Illinois Athletic Commission.

"The Strangler more belts than he thought existed," said Gino today, "when we meet in a finish bout two falls out of three, at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. Then I'll take Lewis' pet belt as a little reminder of the belting party."

Garibaldi gave Jim London a couple of stirring battles at the Garden. The youthful Italian is strong and aggressive and knows his rassling. He feels he will set too fast a pace for his veteran Lewis.

Young Stribling

Pat O'Shocker will bid for another shot at Lewis when he tackles with Ray Steele in the semifinal. Looks as if Pat has taken on a rather large assignment. Jim London is the only one of the Curley - Mondt wrestlers who appears able to upset Steele.

The return bout between Ernie Schaef and Napoleon Jack Dorval has faded out of the picture. Schaef is perfectly willing to go through with his end of the agreement, but the Boston Garden now does not wish to pay the 10 grand called for in Ernie's contract.

This means that the Golden Boy won't whirl into action again until he collides with Young Stribling in the Chicago Stadium on February 26.

Grandovich Pinned by Sonny at Lynn

Leo Larivee Proves Conway Right by Kayoing Bishop

"Good Night Sweetheart!"

I don't suppose the leader of the American Legion band gave any particular thought to the selection he called at the end of the third round of the bout between Leo Larivee of Waterbury, Ct., and red headed Mickey Bishop of Stoughton at the Arena.

Most band leaders are more interested in their music than they are in a boxing match. I looked up at the tired Bishop as the band played "good night sweetheart." It was apparent even at this stage of the bout that he couldn't go the distance.

The end came in the seventh round. In the early stages of the bouts, Larivee had directed his attack to the head. Beginning with the sixth session, the Waterbury warrior started shooting his jacks to the body.

The stout hearted Stoughton boy fought back valiantly in the closing heat, but it was a hopeless battle. Once he stumbled and plunged through the ropes. He was in no shape when he got back into the ring. Larivee followed up his advantage, and as Bishop stumbled again Leo clipped him on the side of the head. Mickey went through the ropes and Referee Jerry Moore counted to two.

I am glad the hand didn't play "Good Night Sweetheart" at the end of the sixth heat. Bishop is too courageous a youngster for anybody intentionally to add to his distress.

Bishop Hurt, but Leo Fails to Take Advantage

Early in the seventh round, Larivee popped a left hand shot into Bishop's body. There was terrific power behind the blow. As the blow landed, Larivee went into a clinch. Bishop collapsed in his arms, but Larivee didn't sense the situation quick enough to let him drop.

Larivee fiddled around for a minute, and then drove another left hook to the pit of the stomach. Bishop went down gracefully, and then collapsed. He was counted out by Referee Moore. It was necessary to assist Mickey to his corner. It was five minutes before he revived.

In the absence of Tom Donahue, who was detained on business in Connecticut, Frank Ducey presented Larivee with the New England middleweight championship belt. Leo says he now wants to meet Gerilla Jones for the world's title.

Eddie Callahan of Nashua, N. H., received the decision over Henry Surette of Leominster after six rounds of battling. Callahan was down three times in the second round, but came up off the floor to stagger his opponent with a left hook to the chin.

Jerry Moore Returns to Boston as Referee

Dick Fleming refereed the preliminaries. He's been officiating at Salem and Lynn. It was the first time that we have seen Dick in Boston ring since he refereed the first Gunboat Smith-Sam Langford bout at the old Arena. Dick's a capable referee, and turned in his usual good job at the Argonne show.

Jim O'Shaughnessy and Al Bates were the judges. Incidentally it was the first time Jerry Moore has refereed a main bout in Boston for several years. Dan Kelly is making a few changes in his quiet, unassuming way.

Joe Anzolino of Vernol st., Everett, hooked away in the new rookie ser ather with went to the holder of the lucky ticket. Joe thanked the 2500 fans for helping him to get a new gasoline chariot.

When Moran Stopped Nelson in Eleventh

BATTLING NELSON OWEN MORAN

This series of "Finishes of Old-Time Fights" will appear exclusively in the sport pages of the Boston Evening American throughout the winter.

Today's story is of the afternoon of November 26, 1910, in San Francisco, when Owen Moran, the cocky Englishman, made a chopping block of the Durable Dane, Battling Nelson. This battle ended in the 11th round after Nelson had been knocked down repeatedly. It was the last real fight of the old champion.

By W. S. FARNSWORTH

"Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness."

So said Cardinal Woolsey, and, in the absence of anything better in the nature of a swan song, Battling Nelson might have borrowed the cardinal's thunder. For Nelson had lost his great assel. He was the Durable Dane no longer.

Owen Moran did for Nelson in the 11th round. The end was not unexpected at that, for while on the receiving end of a volley of hooks and uppercuts in the ninth round, Nelson showed signs of going to pieces.

Moran Waiting for K. O.

He worried through the 10th, principally because Moran was biding his time until the opportunity for a knockout should present itself. He all but lasted through the 11th round for a similar reason. The opportunity finally came, however, and Nelson went down the full length of his body back from a right-hand crack on the chin.

What followed was not lovely to look upon. Sprawling and hoping, more like a toad than a human being, the Dane was half up and wholly down not less than five times. Once, while with bent legs and sagging frame, he reeled on his haunches, there was a sneer of defiance on his blood-smeared face. His brain cleared partly, but not entirely.

As he straightened up after each knockdown or fall it was the easiest thing for Moran to clout him and send him floorward again. Finally Nelson dropped to his knees. He had been struck on the face before going down; but it was Moran's effort to free himself from his opponent's embraces that dragged Nelson to his knees as much as anything.

Referee Counts Nelson Out

The Battler was in a bad way. His eyes seemed to be sightless and his face bruised and swollen. Referee Selig tolled off the seconds in a clear voice and, with the 10th wave of his arm, shouted, "You're out!" A second later Nelson was up again, but it was too late. But afterward claimed he could have gotten up at "ten," but had meekly acquiesced the count by the referee.

Schoolboy Slants

—By GEORGE W. GRIMM—

Dimmy Zaitz of Huntington School is expected to break Tony Geniale's shotput record at the B. A. A. track and field games at the Arena next Saturday afternoon.

Zaitz has been hurling the iron ball further than Tony's record mark. The former English high school giant broke the Y. M. C. A. record earlier in the season.

Larry Scanlon of Boston English will be in the 300 and this should be one of the best races of the day, with the intown school captain trying to beat out Don McKee of Everett and plenty of dark horses in that event.

Dick Ellis of Huntington School will race Leo McCauley of St. John's in the 600 at the Arena meet and this race, too, should provide plenty of thrills for the fans.

Johnny Donovan of Lawrence should take first place in the B. A. A. hurdles and also win a place in the high jump. Donovan is a one-man track team and may collect enough points by himself to give Lawrence a high place in the final standings.

Joe "Joker" McDermott, English high's fine athlete, will make his final appearance in a hockey uniform for the school next month when he leads the blue and blue into the battle with Latin for the city of Boston hockey championship.

HOMEY FOOTING FOR ALI BABA

Perhaps Charley Gordon will sprinkle a little sand on the canvas at the Shubert Theater tomorrow night and try to give a proper setting to the finish wrestling bout between Ali Babs, the Arabian Sheik, and Ted Germaine of South Boston. No real sheik could do his stuff without a little sand around to furnish him some inspiration.

This Germaine person says that for years he has been looking for a regular scrap so that he could muss him up. It appears that a dry store cowboy once stole Germaine's girl from him when he was quite young, and he's been looking for revenge.

Jack Morgan, Tufts wrestler, will meet Sahib Seibeg, the Turk. Those tuff boys from Tufts always were rough on Turks.

A Minister on Peace

Unpreparedness and the Church

The Attleboro Sun has published an interesting letter from the Rev. Myron M. Adams, pastor of the Advent Christian Church there, in which he denounced as sheer folly the military unpreparedness of the United States or any other nation that foolishly believes universal peace is just around the corner.

"Just how long are pacifists going to close their eyes to the fact that the world is confronted by conditions, and not by theories?" said the Rev. Mr. Adams.

"Editors, militarists, statesmen gave ample warning of the approach of the World War several years before its declaration, and, later, a warning to our country of inevitable participation.

"But despite these warnings, we re-elected a President because he had 'kept us out of war.' And we continued our folly until, as Mr. William H. O'Brien of Boston said in a recent speech here, 'thirty-three out of every hundred of our boys went to their death as sacrifices to our criminal unpreparedness.'

"A scriptural proverb declares that 'they that sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind.' Great Britain, Germany, France and Russia, under the hypocritical guise of their 'spheres of influence,' humiliated and robbed China of her territory and trampled upon her independence as a sovereign nation, demonstrating the simplicity with which a helpless nation might be plundered.

"Then Japan waged a victorious war for her part of the spoil, gaining a valuable accession of territory. But when forced to abandon her 'fruits of victory' at behest of 'the powers,' the seeds of jealousy and hatred were sown in the hearts of a pagan people who knew no law but that of expediency, no god but that of might. With deep insight and infinite patience she bided her time.

"Can it be thought for a moment that Japan would dare flout these great world powers now but for the fact that momentarily they lie prostrate and bleeding from the effects of the great tragedy!

"The Christian Church is in no condition to dictate peace to the world 'when there is no peace.' She would better go back to her original commission to 'go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature.'"

The Rev. Mr. Adams is no "small voice." He speaks the exact sentiment of the vast majority of the American people who want peace, but who, nevertheless, want their country to be equipped with the means of defense when aggression from the outside precludes the probability of peace.

Our Bad Arson Record

This map has taken on the appearance of the one you will see at the State Department of Health with the red and black-topped pins which mark the outbreaks of fever, diphtheria, infantile paralysis and other devastating epidemics.

Fire Commissioner McLaughlin estimates that one-half the annual fire loss of $5,000,000 in the city of Boston is the direct result of arson.

He suspects the existence at this time of "a desperate gang of firebugs ready to put the torch to any building for a price."

He says there have been more incendiary fires in this season than when the notorious Red Rooster gang terrorized the city.

Whatever the facts may be, arson is a foul crime.

Once a fire is started, no human calculation can estimate its extent. There can be no guarantee that not only property but human lives will be destroyed.

The incendiarist is deserving of the punishment which society exacts from the hardened criminal who deliberately murders his fellow-man.

If McLaughlin requires any new force or equipment to detect and prevent the outrage he believes to exist he should be given it.

The people of Boston do not want any economy that trifles with life and property.

Our Filthy, Icy Streets

You can judge a man by the company he keeps and a city by its physical appearance of cleanliness and good order.

A visitor to Boston, Cambridge and some of our other suburban communities would think he had landed in some out-of-the-way Icelandic village unaware of the modern rules of health, sanitation and highway safety.

Our streets, a week after the last snow storm, are marked with dangerous ruts and in many places are passable only with risk to pedestrians and automobilists; in most places they are still cluttered with refuse and slush.

We had been given to understand that city fathers everywhere were looking for the chance to put idle men to work with the first fall of snow and to save them and the communities the expensive and demeaning effects of the public dole.

Clean up these streets. Public health, public safety and civic pride all require it be done without further delay or excuse.

In one city a city official complained that the private citizens were shoveling snow from the sidewalks to the streets. Where does he expect them to shovel it, into the furnace or kitchen range?

We expect some diligence and some common sense from these officials. It does not require brains or energy to leave a city snowbound and filthy.

B. Y. W. C. A. Earns Praise

The Boston Young Women's Christian Association, always grateful for any friendly mention, asks this newspaper to read the annual report of its activities for the year just ended.

We find among the many excellent services it renders to its many members the following:

"If the girl is weary and too ill to hunt for a job, with no family to help her and her money gone, she turns for a loan and finds a free bed and food until she rebuilds her health and has the courage to start again."

And further:

"The directors and several hundred volunteers give their time, thought and inspiration because they believe in the girls of Boston and are loyal in maintaining its purpose to develop the all-round girl, regardless of creed, nationality or position."

An institution devoted to such worthy purposes must be successful.

New York Day by Day

Crops of Spenders

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—Big merchants and sundry smaller tradesmen, who have had ample time for reflection during the past months, are wondering just what industry will furnish the next crop of spenders to balloon dividends when things get under full steam.

Invariably the very rich in a new opulence descend upon New York to a part of their wardrobe, jewels, and other luxuries, as well as the rounds of cafes and theaters. The first spending spree came after the gold rush to California. Bewhiskered miners stormed the town bearing pokes of gold dust.

Then came the railroad pioneers and descendants. And they were followed by the puddlers from Pittsburgh who became over-night millionaires. Of all the high spenders the Pittsburgh contingent topped the list. Such cafes as Martin's were designed for them. Harry Thaw became the best known prosperity that came to the Hollywood producers and their cunningly contrived stars. And spawned in the rising tide were the most dazzling get-rich-quick specie of all—the radio millionaires.

Wall Street brokers, too, profited largely in the resulting stock gambling of a pyramid prosperity. The next in line for huge and sudden fortunes were the operators of business. They were entering the home stretch and riding hard when the track grew suddenly muddy.

It was such excessive stages of increased spending that developed New York's elephantiasis of the ego—the eternal quest for something bigger and better. No hotel was magnificent enough. Buildings skyrocketed 50 floors, only to be dwarfed by the 100-storied structure. And so on until the great big headache.

Gilbert Miller proves the most fearless of the 8:30 theater curtain risers. Others threaten, but seeing the scantily filled houses at curtain time, weakened. Mr. Miller "listed the risk" on the Leslie Howard premiere, the most auspicious from a celebrity audience standpoint of the year, at the precise second. Although not more than six rows were filled.

At an adjoining cafe table yesterday three employes of a highly going magazine executed the usual fumbling when the check plopped on the table. Finally one of the trio observed: "Can the monkeyshines! Let's match to see which of us sticks the boss."

Much cheer during troubled days comes from forlorn byways. On broad highways where success once flourished there is slight consolation. I recall a black day when hefty headlines proclaimed a new financial despair. I read them with a hand extended toward a pert manicure girl in a second-rate barber shop. "The world again taking the count," I gloomed. "Yeah," she chirped, "and so was Tunney in Chicago." And somehow I went dancing down the street.

Speaking of this old ball we call the world, it was Phillip Barry who, when someone brightly observed it takes all sorts to make it, observed: "And then what have you?"

* * *

Add yokel yens: To shop for corncob pipes in Dunhill's. (Me and my suppressed desires!)

* * *

And on Madison ave. a fashionable marker sign boasts: "We cater especially to yachts." Under it today someone scrawled: "You mean We Did.'"

* * *

Nor can I think of a neater jape this season than George Jessel's relative who sneered: "You with a new necktie and us without a grand piano." Relatives are often like that.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Life a Spiritual Affair"

HANDICAPPED? Lame, perhaps? Or deaf? Or maybe just crippled in your heart by some cruel blow? And so you think you're out of the running?

"It's no use going on." Is that what you're saying? "I'll never get over this hurt, so life can never be what I thought it would. I might as well take the count right now—not struggle any more."

Saying that? Most of us do, one time or another. Oftener than you'll ever dream I've said that, too, before I sat down to write these articles. And then memory of a story a man once wrote me about himself comes back to me.

He was only a youngster when it happened—18—and had just signed a contract with the Detroit baseball team. Joy? Oh Boy! Beat a combination like that if you can!

He thought he was sitting on the world, and then in less time than it takes to snap your fingers—everything went blooey. A skidding tire. A thud. A crash. They picked him up out of the pieces. When the daze cleared he found himself lying in a hospital. His right leg was gone.

Think you could stand a shock like that? He didn't think he could, either. Perhaps if he'd been older—but you know how things look to a boy. Never run again. Never even walk like a regular guy. A cripple, always? He wanted to die.

I don't even like to think of what those first days must have meant to him. But gradually he began to get things straight. Just what was there left for him? He didn't want to kid himself—didn't want to hand himself any Pollyanna line that would fail him when things pinched?

Just what was life worth for a guy with only one leg? How much of a fight could he put up?

And then the answer came to him, between spasms of hopelessness and fury, and despair. He'd lost a leg; but, after all, he wasn't going to fight life with that leg. Even if he hadn't lost it, he could not have depended for success on that leg. He had to fight life with his spirits.

AND HIS SPIRIT NEEDN'T BE CRIPPLED JUST BECAUSE HIS BODY WAS.

His spirit could only be crippled IF HE LET IT BE CRIPPLED. Otherwise it could stay as whole as any two-legged man's.

And he needn't let it be crippled. If he didn't pity himself or let others pity him—if he didn't regard himself as abnormal, or let others regard him as such—THEN HE WOULDN'T BE ABNORMAL. AND HE COULD FIGHT LIFE WITH ALL THE SPUNK AND HOPE AND PRIDE HE'D EVER HAD.

Yes; he could do that. But how about the girl? (of course, there was a girl. They'd planned on being married that next year.) Would she care to marry a cripple? His mangled pride said he wouldn't. But he wouldn't listen to his pride.

HE WASN'T GOING TO OFFER HER A CRIPPLE TO MARRY! HE WAS GOING TO OFFER HER A MAN WITH A SPIRIT AS SOUND AND WHOLE AS EVER. Would she take him?

Never was there a sweetheart worthy of the name who would have refused a man like that! And so they were married. And they have had a happy life.

"We've truly lived happy ever after." Our four-months-old baby has increased our happiness a thousand fold. Often I think my accident was the turning point toward more happiness than I ever could have known otherwise.

"OF ONE THING I AM CONVINCED. LIFE ISN'T A PHYSICAL MATTER. IT IS A SPIRITUAL AFFAIR. YOU'VE JUST GOT TO THINK RIGHT AND LIFE WILL BE RIGHT. NO MATTER WHO OR WHAT YOU ARE.

"It would have been far better for a lot of chaps I know if they had had to hurdle physical handicaps. Then they wouldn't have stood still."

Handicapped?

Hopeless?

Read that letter.

Just Folks

Supper's Ready

Supper's ready! There's the call
I delight in most of all!
With the evening settling down,
Everybody home from town,
Tired and hungry, but content
With the way the day was spent,
Waiting patient as can be
Mother's cry: "Come on to tea!"

Supper's ready! One and all
Hurry gladly down the hall,
And with smiles upon their faces
At the table take their places.
Here's a summons, girl and boy,
Not to labor, but to joy;
Not to do and dare and die,
But to bread and meat and pie!

Supper's ready! Do you hear?
Loved ones come and gather near,
Put away your petty cares,
To the table draw your chairs.
Now the busy day is done,
Let's be merry every one,
And be grateful to the Lord
For the food upon the board.

Are American Children Less Deserving?

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era," and other important works, now writing for The Boston Evening American.

FROM THE BEGINNING it must have been clear that one of two things would have to be done about these 8,000,000 unemployed and their dependents—work would have to be furnished through a prosperity loan such as was urged a year ago by Mr. Hearst, Senator Wagner and Senator La Follette, or money to prevent starvation would have to be appropriated from the Treasury.

The Administration was against the prosperity loan—which politically would have been the best thing possible for the Administration.

If it is now against direct relief, it goes on record as washing its hands entirely of the human problem of the unemployed; and that will not be good for the Administration in any sense.

We Are Against the "Dole"

We are in favor of the appropriation; and we are against the "dole." For the appropriations proposed by Senators Wagner and La Follette have nothing in common with the English "dole," where the term originated.

Senator La Follette made this plain in his illuminating Senate speech:

"The bill does not contemplate definite and specific allowances to individuals and to their dependents. It is based entirely upon the traditional American method of relief, namely, relief on the basis of need. It does not propose to set up a separate agency whereby the Federal Government will, through a great bureaucracy in Washington, make direct payments in cash or in kind to individual citizens in the respective communities. The bill proposes to utilize the agencies of relief which are now in existence and which are now cracking and groaning under the load they are attempting to carry."

We Have Helped the Unemployed in Europe

The President's Unemployment Emergency Committee under Mr. Gifford, has failed; and the testimony of Mr. Gifford before the Senate committee disclosed such a profound ignorance of conditions as to explain its failure even to comprehend the crisis.

Now men, women and children are up against the guns. And, as Senator La Follette said, "during the period since this depression began this is the first time that Congress has turned seriously to the consideration of the rank and file of the people of the United States."

Those eager to help the banks and railroads are seeking to impose the falsehood upon the people that the Government never has appropriated money for the relief of citizens suffering through no fault of their own. Millions, time and time again, have been appropriated for the purpose, as the record shows.

Not only have we appropriated millions for the relief of citizens here, but we have appropriated millions for the relief of men, women and children in other lands. Thus money from the Treasury went to succor the destitute in Cuba, in the French West Indies, in Italy, in China.

Is the answer made that these were the victims of earthquakes? It was famine—such a famine as confronts millions of our own—in China.

But not only have we appropriated money to prevent the starvation and desolation of victims of earthquakes and famines, due to failures of the crops—we have appropriated vast sums to feed the European victims of economic depression. We have appropriated money, if you please, to help the unemployed in Europe.

Children Are Dying of Undernourishment

There are millions of American children who are literally starving, dying of undernourishment because deprived of milk through the unemployment of their fathers, according to social welfare agencies and charitable societies.

Eight years ago, when that was true of the children in a European country, a demand was made on Congress for money from the American Treasury to feed these children.

The demand was made by Herbert Hoover—a written demand served on a Congressional committee.

In this demand he said:

"Our only hope is that the next generation will be better than this one, and there is no hope if they are to be stunted and degenerate from undernourishment. I recognize the arguments that may be brought against charitable actions, but I refuse to apply these arguments to children."

But it appears Mr. Hoover is applying these arguments to the children of the United States.

Mr. Hoover had no objections to using the $20,000,000 appropriated from the Treasury to feed the undernourished children of Russia eleven years ago; nor did the American Red Cross. Just how does it become vicious to appropriate American money to furnish proper nourishment to American children?

The National Government Must Do Its Part

And local government units, on which the President urges a "dole," have reached, or are reaching, the end of their resources.

And the plain brutal truth is that if American children are not "to be stunted and degenerate from undernourishment" the National Government must do its part.

If Republican Senators have decided, as a party, to oppose the feeding of these children, and their mothers, that is their privilege; they have the right to proclaim the party policy and attitude; but the humane people of America who heard no protest against the governmental feeding by us of the children of China, Cuba, Germany and Russia still have their right to pass upon that party policy and attitude in November.

The Administration cannot talk "humanity" about the children of Europe, and talk "dole" when it comes to the question of the starvation of the women and children of America.

It cannot say that we cannot afford as a nation to meet the nation's responsibility to the millions of undernourished and slowly starving children of America, but can afford to take over the billions of the debts of other nations and pay them out of the American Treasury.

More and more, we are convinced that what we need is an Administration that thinks of America first, and of all Americans, and not merely a small and powerful segment of America.

Senator Watson Has a Haunting Fear

Whether the primary mission of Mr. Mellon in England is to arrange a further reduction or the entire transfer of the European debts to America or not, the comments of the European press leave no doubt as to the interpretation across the sea. Even Senator Watson evidently has a haunting fear, since he explains in great detail that whatever Mr. Mellon may do about the debts, nothing really is done until Congress acts upon the arrangements made.

On the subject of the debts Mr. Mellon made his position quite plain in his report to Congress at the beginning of the session.

Capital Silhouettes

NO PUSSY-FOOTING pacifism marked the centennial celebration of the birth of George Washington. The record of that historic anniversary unfolds before us from the distant past like a refreshing breath of inspiration. It was a rededication to the ideals of the founders of the republic.

THERE SEEMS to be disposition nowadays to ignore the fact that General Washington was, first of all, a fighting man, that he won American independence not by soft phrases, but by hard bullets. One dreads the stream of soapy platitudes that will be spilled on the occasion of the bicentennial, unless a determined effort is made by all patriots of this era to see to it that emphasis is laid on the fact that Washington was no pacifist.
